ET heifer tops sale at $8000

HARRISBURG — The fact that one of Roy and Glenn Henry s consignments wore the Lot 13 tag around her neck didn t seem to matter to the bidders during Wednesday s Pennsylvania Holstein Association State Calf Sale held at the Farm Show Complex

As a matter of fact, bidding on this heifer, sired by Ack-Lee Chief Moneymaker, topped the sale after auctioneer Doty Remsburg s gavel recognized the $8000 bid of cattle agent Harold Hartt of Susquehanna

Walking to where the official photographs of buyer, calf, and consignor would be snapped, Hartt explained he bought the calf as the representative of Curti, a dairy operation in Waukena, California

Henry-Acres Jacoba-ET will be joining her two full-sisters who have already entered the ranks of replacement heifers vying for a spot on the 1500 head milking string Curti purchased the two embryo transfer litter mates of Jacoba within the past month — one at the Pen-Col Invitational sale held last Monday at Millville, and the other at the Great Expectations Sale held March 12 in Lancaster

The 28th Pennsylvania State Holstein Show heralded both bovine and bureaucratic celebrities. Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Penrose Hallowell was on hand to present the grand champion banner and trophy to All-American Northcroft Ella Elevation's owners. The reserve grand champion honors went to another aged cow Parkacres Sun Ivy, owned by Doeberiener and Parks, Jamestown. Pictured with the champions are: from left, George Knight; Secretary Hallowell; George Knight III; Lowell Lindy, at Ella's halter; Harvey Clem, at Ivy's halter; Ed Doeberiener; and Judge Keene.

HARRISBURG — It was the champion's circle and the horseshoe of flowers again for Ella as the eye-catching Holstein strode through the show ring during the 28th Annual Pennsylvania State Holstein Show late Thursday evening.

Northcroft Ella Elevation, recently named All-American Aged Cow, stood at the top of her class for cows of any age who milked over 100,000 pounds. After taking the blue, it was an easy task for Judge Richard Keene of Keeneland Farm, Gilbertsville, New York, to tag the super Holstein Senior Champion.

The crowd of spectators began to file out of the large arena almost before Judge Keene awarded the Grand Champion banner to the well-known bovine.

Ella is the daughter of Round Oak Rag Apple Elevation, born February 26, 1974. Her lactation record supports this Holstein female's claim to fame — her 5-year-old 305-day record was 39,781 pounds milk with 1580 pounds fat.

The great cow was bred by the Estate of Clifford A. Eccleston. Her owners are George III, Cynthia, Paul and James Knight, Airville.

For Reserve Grand Champion honors, Judge Keene went with the

Ag chairmanship opens, several bills brewing

BY CURT HARLER

HARRISBURG — The House Agriculture Committee Chairman post will be vacant following a special election held in northwestern Pennsylvania

Roy W Wilt, the Greenville Republican currently serving as Ag Chairman, Tuesday won a contest for the 50th district senate seat Following official tabulation of the vote and Wilt's certification as a Senator, a new Ag Chairman will have to be named.

That process will take 20 to 30 days

Three senior house members have the inside track for the job which will be awarded on a seniority, non-chairmanship basis

William D Hutchinson, Schuylkill Haven, is one of three House Class of 1975 members without a chairmanship He does chair the joint state government committee, but that is not a house assignment

The others are Joseph V Grieco, Jersey Shore, and Edward F Burns, Jr , Cornwells Heights

Be aware of farm rights in considering gas lease

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

LANCASTER — Caution is being urged on the part of farmers amidst a flurry of activity by various companies and agents to obtain gas and oil leases in a number of counties throughout the Commonwealth

Leasing activity has been reported to be quite heavy in such areas as Perry, Cumberland, Franklin and Adams counties, and even extending into the eastern section of Lancaster County

Numerous contacts by the leasing agents have prompted the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association to conduct a series of informational meetings in various counties to advise farmers of their rights under such leasing agreements

One such meeting was held by the Franklin County Farmers'Association on Monday night and another is planned in Snyder County next week

Purpose of the meetings is to advise Association members to proceed slowly and cautiously and be thoroughly aware of all of their rights before signing a leasing agreement, according to Richard L Prether, of the PFA

The PFA, through its Legal Service Plan, is recommending caution by farmers in several major areas

–Don't rush into signing an agreement

–Farmers don't have to accept the leasing agreement as offered by the companies or agents

–Everything in the agreement is negotiable

–Farmers must look out for all of their rights in an agreement and should seek proper legal advice to assure such protection

–It's possible for PFA members

MCMP explores merger, reviews Holly situation

BY JOYCE BUPP

Staff Correspondent

COCKEYSVILLE, MD – Several hundred members of Maryland Cooperative Milk Producers heard an update on continuing merger discussions, and were warned of the dangers of drowning the milk market with overproduction, during their annual business meeting, held Saturday at the Marriott s Hunt Valley Inn

Negotiations with other cooperatives have reached a very delicate stage, indicated president Herbert W Wessel

Any resulting cooperative must treat all members equal and must look at what is best for the entire cooperative

Wessel, a Hampstead dairyman, heads the Baltimore-based marketing cooperative, with over 1,000 members throughout Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and southern Pennsylvania

Carl Allison, board member and head of MCMP s cooperative planning committee, elaborated on the merger talks

[illegible] and best benefit our members he asked the dairymen-members, who last year voted to continue exploratory merger discussions with neighboring milk cooperatives

Allison answered No to his own question and said that cooperative marketing is being disrupted about by such factors as inflation, changes in population, and closing and relocation of bottling plants

Those uncontrollable influences on the marketplace, plus the obvious efficiency to be gained in hauling fat testing and field

Back in the old days when folks first learned how to make cheese, there were no square containers The belief started that a square cheese wouldn't keep well or taste right

Home Hints: Use a large plastic lawn bag to cover your barbecue grill to protect it from bad weather

Lancaster Farming says...

There's no joy in others' woe

There's an undertone of glee, or at least of smug satisfaction, running through much of the farm community now that dairymen have lost their April price boost

The atmosphere is similar to that of a bunch of children watching a spoiled rich kid fall off his shiny new bike into a mud puddle . the pompous have been brought back to earth

Killing the semi-annual production cost increase was seen by politicians as urgent and important in the fight to control inflation

President Reagan, in one of his first official actions upon recovering from surgery after the heinous attempt on his life Monday, signed into law the bill eliminating the April price boost The 7 15 a m Tuesday timing of the action should show how strongly the Administration feels about the milk program

Within dairy organizations, there seems to be some confusion over whether cutting semi-annual adjustments is a good thing Both Inter-State and Maryland Cooperative Milk Producers are on record favoring the move, noting the current surplus is creating an artificial price floor, building a surplus, and placing a burden on taxpayers

On the other hand, as major and influencial a group as the giant Associated Milk Producers urged its members to push for "a sound price support program, including semi-annual recognition of increases in production costs "

Lancaster Farming agrees with the cut Dairymen have gotten too close to the edge and need to pull back, to get supply and price back in balance

Taxpayers, including dairymen and other farmers, will save about $2 billion dollars by September 30 of this year in CCC outlays as a result of the measure signed Tuesday

Dairymen are working with a seven percent increase in milk prices, although cost rises of 10 percent will more than eat up the gains If not the best possible financial scene, dairy is in far better shape than the livestock industry in general

Still, there is no cause to rejoice because the single most prosperous group in farming today is going to have to tighten its management and margins

There is no benefit in having one segment of society benefit at the cost of another It is unfortunate that dairymen are going to be pinched, but we have seen no reliable prediction that there are going to be the wholesale problems in the milkhouse that have beset poultry farmers

Hogs are struggling up from year-ago prices of $29 Cattle markets are improving The grain operator is doing well, although without an embargo profits could be higher

Rather than taking delight in the belt-tightening in the dairy industry, all of agriculture should band together to improve its common lot

Sure, dairymen have been riding higher than the rest of the ag community even while singing the price blues on a false note New realities may sting

But the next time, all farmers should work together to get pigs and poultry, cattle and corn prices up to dairy's profitable levels, not smirk while the situation turns the other way around

CATHEDRALS AND BREAD

April 5, 1981

Background Scripture:
Matthew 26
Devotional Reading:
Isaiah 51 4-6

My college philosophy profesor, Dr Glenn Morrow, once told us of a Sunday school class that was shown a picture of a Roman amphitheatre in which Christians were being devoured by lions. "What does this picture say to us as Christians?" the teacher asked one little boy The little fellow pointed to the picture and exclaimed, Why here's a poor lion who doesn't have a Christian!"

The little boy's answer proves that even compassion can be misplaced In fact, there's hardly any virtue in life that can't be misplaced or misused Often it's a matter of getting the right idea at the wrong time That's what happened during the last week of Jesus earthly ministry when, while resting in Bethany, he was annointed by an anonymous woman as he sat at table with his disciples His disciples made the right response, but at the wrong time

"Why This Waste?"

How often Jesus had tried to impress upon his disciples their need for compassion for the poor and helpless Not only in what he said, but also in what he did he emphasized this priority of God's kingdom And how often it must have seemed to Jesus that his disciples were still not getting the message But that day when the woman poured the costly ointment on Jesus's head the disciples suddenly became concerned about the poor

Why this waste? For this ointment might have been sold for a large sum, and given to the poor

The logic of their indignation was inescapable, wasn't it? Who could argue with their reasoning? Certainly they were voicing no more than what must have been in the Master's own mind Yet, when he realized what they were saying to the woman, his rebuke must have caught them by surprise Why do you trouble the woman? For she has done a beautiful thing to me For you always have the poor with you, but you will not always have me

One cannot help but wonder if it really was compassion for the poor or jealousy that motivated the disciples that day Doesn't their Why this waste? have just the slight flavor of sour grapes? Was it the waste of the costly oil that bothered them or that this woman – this outsider – was the one who was doing it? They could not afford to make such a gesture themselves and perhaps they didn't want anyone else to do it either

Always The Poor

It seems that the disciples had made a kind of law out of Jesus pronouncements on the treatment of the poor But others have done the same thing with Jesus reply – you always have the poor with you They have used it to interpret Jesus as fatalistic about poverty And so they have reasoned if poverty is always going to be with us, let's not get too concerned with it, for Jesus himself accepted it

The example which Jesus set for us is made manifest in a faith which can both build cathedrals and minister to those in need It doesn't have to be one or the other

To Look At Oil and Gas Leases:

We are getting calls from farmers that are being approached about oil and gas leases for their farms There are several things you need to be concerned with if you become involved

The life of the lease should be spelled out so that at any time the lessee (company) failed to pay, the lease would automatically be cancelled. You need to consider the water rights so that water could not be used without written approval Also, any waste water needs to be handled so as not to be a pollutant problem

You own the land, so you need to spell out the responsibilities in case any action is brought against either party There could be damages; clarify these responsibilities

Most leases specify there shall be no drilling within certain distances from building and property lines. You may want to include a scenic area such as a pond or picnic site

Remember that you are the landowner and no one can force you to sign a lease or condemn your property for a gas or oil well And finally, be sure to counsel with your lawyer before you sign anything

To Practice Safety

We are rapidly approaching the very busy spring season when field activities are heavy Safety statistics indicate that accidents increase when people are rushing to complete a job With spring oats time here and preparing for corn planting not far behind, we need to take time to be safe

Farming is not the safest occupation Records indicate that the average farm worker can expect that once every four years he'll be injured so severely that medical attention is needed Farmers have a work accident rate that's two and a half times greater than the average for all industries The problem is that unlike industry, farmers work with minimal amount of supervision and they may not be properly trained for the job

It is important to take a break in mid-morning and mid-afternoon to relax, even if it is only fifteen minutes It could be the most important part of your day Always think and act with a positive and safe attitude

To Use Pesticides Safely

The arrival of spring also means that we are in the season when farmers will be using many different types of pesticides We need to stress the importance to read

GREAT GRAIN HANDLING SYSTEMS BEGIN WITH GOOD PLANNING AND M-C DRYERS

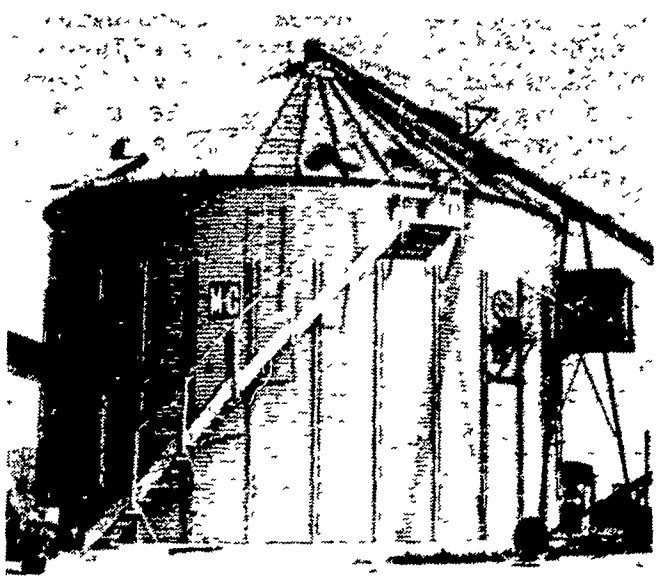
The ENERGY SAVING IN-BIN DRYING SYSTEM



The new Mathews Continuous In-Bin Dryer is a combination storage drying and cooling bin designed to save you money It is efficient, fast, easy to manage and costs less to operate The drying process is fast; while the cooling process is slow, eliminating stress cracks and damage caused by fast cooling There is nothing else like it on the market The Mathews design requires no wet holding bin or separate bin for cooling

- Saves energy for profitable operations
- Proven high capacity results (357 bushels per hour)
- Eliminates the most common problems found in other in-bin dryers
- Low per bushel costs

HERE'S HOW IT WORKS...

As wet grain enters the top of the bin, it flows into the upper drying chamber as harvested, with no need for a wet holding bin This upper chamber holds up to 4 feet of wet grain (2250 bushels)

Every seven minutes, a continuous flow auger makes a complete revolution around the upper drying floor, drawing the dried grain into the lower cooling area

Hot air is introduced under the upper floor to dry the wet grain and to heat the surface of the grain that is distributed into the lower cooling chamber The air that is used for cooling the grain picks up heat during the cooling process This heated air is then used again in the drying process, saving on fuel costs

When not being used for drying, the bin will store 8500 bushels of grain

Manor FFA helping bluebirds

MILLERSVILLE — The Manor Chapter of the Future Farmers of America has started a new BOAC project to replenish the bluebird populaton.

A BOAC (Building our American Communities) project is an activity an FFA chapter performs to improve or provide a service to its surrounding area. The Manor FFA is working with Muddy Run Recreation Park and Bob Schutsky to help bring bluebirds back to our community

Members of the Manor FFA built 50 nesting boxes and placed them in key areas of the environment The chapter placed boxes in local parks, including six in Safe Harbor Park, seven in Manor Township Park, and eight in Millersville Boro Park They also placed 14 boxes in Holtwood Sediment Fields and 15 along the West Branch of the Conestoga River.

The birds left the area because of lack of nesting areas resulting from development and few wooden fences for nests. The Manor Chapter hopes that the boxes will draw the birds back to this area in which they were once very populous

The project will serve as a long range project because records will need to be kept on the activity of the boxes Also repair and maintenance must be continued for success of this project.

Although the Manor FFA cannot supply bird boxes to interested people this year, the chapter can provide information to begin a backyard nesting area. Interested persons may write to the Manor FFA through Penn Manor High School, Millersville to receive information on construction, placement, and management of a bluebird nesting box

Letters To The Editor

Dear editor:

Did I miss something when I read "state to bleed hogs in extensive PRV survey" or is the state really doing the following:

1. Sending its technicians onto every hog farm in a pre-selected area to bleed farmer-owned hogs for PRV blood test?

2. Assuring farmers "the danger of carrying the disease to your farm is nill?"

3. Promising to quarantine those herds whose owners do not agree to let PDA test the hogs?

4. Quarantining herds until blood test results are available?

5. Being very fussy about what's to happen when (if) reactors are found and who is to foot the bill?

The PDA admits that PRV does not affect humans

I suppose the PDA feels that it has the power to implement such a program — but the whole plan looks to me like it is grist for some attorney's mill

PRV or no PRV, surely farmers have some right to due process before the PDA comes swooping down on them and follow the instructions on the label on the pesticide container This is a must if the grower is to be successful and produce a quality product The law requires that all pesticides be registered and carry a label with full instructions A few people think that adding a little more than recommended will give better results, that is not true, it is not only wasteful but could result in a higher residue on the plant or animal

Take time to read the label and follow the instructions to the letter

To Make Pastures Produce

One of the best ways to improve your permanent pastures is to apply lime and fertilizer, practice rotational grazing and clip them regularly says Glenn Shirk, Extension Dairy Agent This is quicker, cheaper and involves less risk than tearing up the old sod and reseeding Most permanent pastures have sufficient seed of desirable grass species The only thing they need is a little tender loving care and the opportunity to grow, and to recover from grazing pressures

Thus, fertility and rotational grazing are very beneficial The more paddocks you have, the better it is If your acreage is limited to your size herd, restrict the amount of time cattle and livestock are permitted to graze Don t let them trample the grass unnecessarily by allowing them to roam freely over the pasture while not grazing After a paddock has been grazed, it can be clipped to control weed growth and to keep the grass young and nutritious, and in a continual vegetative state of growth, grasses, when allowed to mature, tend to be finished growing for the season. This is also a good time to apply fertilizer and necessary herbicides, while allowing the grass to recover prior to being grazed again

Super Structure.

Some say G-4606 is "iron tough" With stalks that stand straight and true 'til harvest And roots anchored firm and deep

It's so tough that it thrives on thicker populations than normal, to let you push for higher yields

It really turns out the bushels of high-quality grain under good management Delivers impressively under heat and drouth, too

Interest in G-4606 is growing fast.

Md. lawmakers fight thistles

ANNAPOLIS, Md — Thistles are thriving like never before in Maryland And the growing menace of these prickly crop-chokers is causing concern in agricultural circles that has reached all the way to the state legislature in Annapolis

Major offenders are the Canada thistle and the musk or nodding thistle, notes Ronald L Ritter, Extension weed control specialist and assistant professor of agronomy at the University of Maryland

A generation ago, these two weeds were virtually unknown in Maryland, Ritter commented The musk thistle was imported by accident from Europe, and the Canada thistle has been progressively moving southward since the turn of the century from our neighbor to the north

New cropping practices by farmers, changes in roadside mowing procedures by highway maintenance crews and the chronic problem of tracts of idle land awaiting development, have all contributed to the rapid population buildup of these two thistles throughout the state during recent years

Other contributors to the thistle problem are utility rights-of-way and abandoned railroad trackage Last year's semi-drought weather conditions were also favorable for thistle growth

In addition, Maryland has had no natural insect predators which control thistle populations by attacking the seed-bearing flower heads But such predators are now starting to be introduced

Like most members of their plant family, the Canada and musk thistle usually bear purplish flowers throughout the summer - although white flowers are sometimes seen, particularly on the Canada thistle

Both of these thistles are prolific seed producers, and they spread by having each seed attached to a plume which allows the seed to be carried long distances by the wind

[illegible] flower head than the [illegible] thistle Because the head bends over when mature, the plant is often referred to as the nodding thistle It is a biennial plant, which infers a two-year life-span and reproduction only from seeds This means that it can be fairly well eradicated in one growing season of chemical and cultural multi-treatment

The Canada thistle, on the other hand, is a perennial weed, and its roots can survive for many years Since it spreads both by seed and underground runners, it is more difficult to control - unsually requiring at least two full growing seasons of chemical and cultural treatments

Ritter reported that the Maryland Extension Service is currently involved in a statewide educational campaign regarding the Canada and musk thistle problem

During March, the Extension Service cooperated with the state Department of Agriculture and the state Department of Transportation to conduct a series of meetings for highway maintenance workers and county Extension agricultural agents

The meetings covered origin and nature of the thistle problem, identification, and control measures Program leaders also reported on the proposed thistle control law which is expected to be passed by the current session of the Maryland General Assembly

If passed, the law (House Bill 1768) would go into effect on Jan. 1, 1983, making it illegal for property owners to allow thistles to go to seed

Ritter explained that the two-year moratorium was written into the bill to allow time for an educational campaign and to test the effectiveness of natural insect predators' The time lapse would also allow for additional research on cultural and chemical control methods by University of Maryland agronomists.

Livestock marketers ask end to stockyard funding

WASHINGTON, D C. — Congress was urged here Wednesday to heed the call of the American public for less government in their daily lives by deleting all funding for the stockyards provision of the Packers and Stockyards Act.

Livestock Marketing Association, a Kansas City-based trade group representing marketing businesses throughout the U.S. and in Canada, made the request in testimony before House and Senate Agriculture subcommittees on appropriations.

The testimony was offered in a joint statement of LMA President Lemmy Wilson, Livestock Laws Reform Commission Chairman J.D. Branscome, LMA General Manager C.T. Tad' Sanders, and LMA Executive Counsel Dennis R. Braddock.

LMA told the subcommittees that the livestock marketing industry participated last November in sending a message' to Washington that the public 'wanted less government and less interference in their day-to-day lives.

By deleting funding of the stockyards section you will be responding to that call, the statement said

- LMA's appearance was part of its overall campaign to reduce the regulatory burden currently imposed on the marketing sector

The central element of this campaign is the Trade Group's Livestock Marketing Reform Act, which the statement noted will soon be introduced in both bodies of Congress.

This legislation would replace the stockyards provision of the P&S Act 'with modern law reflecting current marketing realities," the statement said.

LMA noted that the 'nature of the livestock industry has changed significantly in the 60 years since the P&S Act was passed .this is especially true in livestock marketing.'

Today, the statement continued, the livestock marketing industry has developed into nearly 12,400 registered markets and dealers

There is no longer a legal or factual monopoly in livestock marketing to justify the current degree of federal regulation in the industry '

After 60 years of rule making and amendment, the statement said, livestock marketing businesses are now faced with a maze of federal regulations that are woefully out of step with the new technology, structural change, and vastly increased competition that has reshaped livestock production and marketing.'

Consequently, federal rules under (the stockyards provision) of the Packers and Stockyards Act fail to serve the public good because they are outmoded and actually inhibit the development of more efficient methods of serving our customers and ultimately, the American consumer. '

LMA also pointed out that currently livestock markets, dealers and brokers are restricted from operating related businesses, 'regardless of the need for that business in the community and regardless of (the individual's) own particular need to diversify in order to remain in business.

The Trade Group also told the subcommittee that additional tax dollars can be saved and burdensome federal regulation reduced by limiting the activities of the Office of General Counsel with respect to the stockyards provision of the P&S Act."

The statement reminded the subcommittees that they "have the power to strike the first blow in limiting the bureaucracy through the appropriations process ..you are not constrained to provide continued funding for outmoded ...needed federal regulation

Livestock Marketing Association urges you to use that power objectively. If this is done, we are confident that you will agree with us that the money used to administer the stockyards provisions of the Packers and Stockyards Act could be and should be eliminated."

Local farmers can double small grain yields

LANDISVILLE — Contending that northeastern farmers could readily double yields of wheat, oats and barley, Penn State and federal researchers are growing experimental wheat on 10 Centre and Lancaster County cooperating farms

They are led by Harold G Marshall, adjunct professor of plant breed and coordinator of the Center for Cereals Research Supported by the U.S Department of Agriculture, the reseachers aim to dispel a "defeatist" aura that has made small grains the poorly managed, low priority crops of a farm-rich region

"Our own findings that yields easily can be doubled - as well as routine harvests almost double those of the Northeast in European areas with similar growing conditions-have convinced us," says Marshall

With intensive crop management and genetically improved varieties, we believe small grains rapidly could become major crops in Pennsylvania, New York and Maryland - resulting in a mini-agricultural revolution, which would help transform a food- and feed grain-deficit area into a variable breadbasket

Moreover, wheat alone easily could compete with corn as a cash crop This would reduce, or hopetully reverse, a dangerous trend toward genetic vulnerability, due to increasing dependence on corn as the grain crop of the region "

Taken together, he says, yield bonanzas for wheat, oats and barley would greatly benefit the region's farmers, consumers and agribusiness And should yields exceed [illegible] farmers, with easy access to seaports, potentially could capitalize on worldwide food demands

Looking only at the future, the monetary gains could be enormous Thus, the Northeast annually harvests about 650,000 acres of wheat - of which 260,000 acres are in Pennsylvania The average yield is 35 bushels per acre, though top producers are getting much more

Assuming only a very conservative five bushel-per-acre average increase for the region, says Marshall, and given the current wheat price of $4 40 a bushel - the annual value of the region's wheat crop would go up by $14 3 million, and that of Pennsylvania by $5 7 million

In oats, Pennsylvania annually harvests about 55 bushels-per-acre, on 350,000 acres. At $2 40 a bushel, an increase of five bushels would give farmers an extra $4 2 million With a similar yield hike, the rest of the region would get an additional $13 3 million. For barley, the respective gains for Pennsylvania and the region from a five-bushel increase would be $1 7 million and $7 million

Keep in mind,' Marshall emphasizes, that these estimates are very conservative and achievable in a couple of years '

Seeking to make such predictions a realty, Marshall, a USDA research agronomist, sought, and in 1979 received, federal support for the establishment at Penn State of the CCR Today, working full or part-time, 14 agronomists, plant breeders and pathologists, weed scientists, crop physiologists and agricultural economists have a two-fold goal.

They are trying to prove to farmers that, using current crop varieties - as well as more intensive cultural practices and coordinated pest management strategies - enormously larger small-grains harvests are possible now

Also, looking to the future, they re developing new cultivars, to achieve still greater yields, by building in better resistence to diseases, insects, weeds and diverse other environmental stresses peculiar to the region

For the moment, the CCR team is engaged in a three-year pilot project, aimed at developing and demonstrating optimum management practices

Last October, the researchers planted soft red wheat (mainly used for cookies, cakes and pastries) on six Lancaster and four Centre County farms While the researchers try 48 intensive treatment" combinations on 12-by-100 foot test strips, farmers will use conventional management practices on surrounding land

After harvest, the experimental and normal crops will be compared for yields, as well as for incidence of disease, insects, weeds and lodging , a common problem where wheat stalks, too tall and weak, break readily

The outcome is predictable, says Marshall For 30 years, northeastern small grain yields have been stagnant Farmers still grow such grains largely because they're necessary for livestock feed and bedding

However, discouraged by low yields, farmers have lacked an incentive to manage small grains as intensively as they do corn and alfalfa Likewise, they haven t had the know-how to use innovative growing techniques

Part of the problem has been low research priorities This has led experts to neglect the region s small grain s problems, and to fail to develop varieties designed for the region's basically cloudy, humid weather A major cause of low yields is the fact that cultivars used here were developed for the sunnier, drier clime of Ohio, Illinois and Indiana '

Thus, it is not surprising that, in 1978, for example, Pennsylvania wheat farmers averaged 33 bushels-per-acre-while their English counterparts got 77 bushels

Moreover, while Pennsylvania wheat yields barely have changed since 1950, Britain s have doubled The difference. use of improved varieties and intensive crop and pest management systems

Because intensive growing systems were used by Penn State s CCR team in 1979, their experimental wheat plots averaged up to 95 bushels-per-acre

Actually, Marshall explains, they only used two intensive procedures a high seeding rate and a large amount of nitrogen fertilizer

What are other components of intensive management' Basically, intensive means using combinations of cultural and pest management practices which, in the absence of genetic resistence, will do two things yield denser grain stands and cut losses due to plant pathogens

Other main intensive techniques are careful crop rotation and land preparation and uniform seeding depth

Judge Keene deliberated some time when placing Ivy's class — finally moving her up from third place to first He emphasized he liked her dairyness and her superior udder, and had to start the class with her despite her smaller scale

The Junior Champion, according to Judge Keene, was an outstanding heifer but could not compete for the grand championship with the two senior cows

According to Raymond Seidel, Kutztown, owner of the bull, Kona is out of Indianvale Star Sebrina, a cow he purchased last year at the Berks County Sale The bull champion is sired by Plushanski Persuader

In the group classes, Singing Brook Farms, owned by Obie Snider and family of Imler, took blue ribbons in Best Female Bred & Owned By Exhibitor, Senior Get of Sire (Paclamar Double Tribune), and Best Three Females control in minimum-till corn, you seldom have a second chance. That's why so many successful minimum-till corn producers have added Banvel®* herbicide to their weed control program. Banvel stops tough, late-emerging broadleaf weeds like seedling Canada thistle, morningglory, pigweed and lambsquarter. And Banvel can be tank-mixed with atrazine and 2,4-D for added flexibility.

The Produce of Dam blue ribbon went to Dyar-Acres Holsteins, Shippensburg for Dyar-Acres Rag Apple Elsie And the Dam & Daughter class was topped by Kerchenhill Holsteins with R-R-Mooktown Lady, dam, and R-R-Mooktown Ideal Lady, daughter

John Howard, right, bid his farewell to the Pennsylvania Holstein Association during Thursday evening's show. Howard will be starting a new career as a dairy farmer in Lancaster. He has already started his herd with the purchase of 15 head of — you guessed it — Holsteins.

This season, get maximum control with Banvel. And help get your minimum-till corn off to a healthy headstart over tough broadleaf weeds.

Velsicol reminds you, before using any pesticide please read the label. *Banvel is Velsicol's brand name for dicamba.

State livestock dealer's license pulled on brucellosis charges

PLAINFIELD — J. Richard Zimmerman, Plainfield, will have his Livestock Dealers and Brokers License suspended for one year, effective April 17, 1981, according to the Department of Agriculture

Zimmerman, under state law, has until that date to submit to the hearing examiner any exceptions to the findings of the Ag Department's Hearing Board.

Zimmerman said Friday morning he thinks he will file a exception to the Board's findings

"It is a little false, the things they say," he said

He said he would wait until his lawyer prepared a brief before talking further but indicated he will meet the April 17 deadline for filing an exception.

The case revolves around interstate transportation of cattle without proper health certificates for brucellosis.

The hearing Board said that sometime between March and May 31, 1980 Zimmerman purchased a cow bearing an eartag identification number 51ABT7829.

The cow bearing that ID number originated in Maryland. It had a negative brucella test on November 15, 1979 in the herd of Glen Eaves, Woodsboro, Maryland.

However, the hearing Board said, Maryland Department of Agriculture officials did not issue any interstate health certificate for the transportation of the cow, nor could Zimmerman produce any such certificate or interstate movement records for the cow

Then, on May 31, 1980 veterinarian R.B Weber conducted tuberculosis and brucellosis tests on 33 cows owned by Zimmerman, at Zimmerman's request, including the cow with ID number 51ABT7829

On June 3 the record of brucellosis test results for the May 31 test indicated that cow 51ABT7829 had a positive brucella reaction and it was declared a Brucellosis reactor

Sometime after May 31 and on or before June 6, nine cows from the Zimmerman herd were shipped to Green Dragon Auction in Ephrata.

Eight of the animals were sold and one subsequently was returned to Zimmerman's farm and slaughtered in his butcher shop. Zimmerman said he does not maintain identification records on animals he slaughters in his shop.

On June 12 an Order of Special Quarantine was hand-delivered to Zimmerman and also was posted on his farm.

The Quarantine included all the animals tested on May 31 and 28 additional animals which were tested May 15 The reactor animal and eight other cows could not be located on the farm at that time, but Zimmerman helped the health authorities trace the missing cattle

The hearing Board said Zimmerman delivered the nine animals to Green Dragon after the tests were taken by Dr. Weber, but before he received the results of the test

The Board said Zimmerman knew he was required by state law and state regulations to have the results of the May 31 test before he could sell the tested animals.

Records obtained from the Green Dragon Auction can not establish if the reactor cow was sold at auction on June 6 or whether it was returned to Zimmerman's farm and subsequently slaughtered on the farm

Officials of the Agriculture Department returned to Zimmerman's farm twice more, once in early July and again in early August, and were able to identify or account for all animals previously quarantined

The suspension of Zimmerman's License 00766 will remain in effect until April 16, 1982 unless Zimmerman successfully overturns the decision of the Board —CH

Dauphin seedling sale deadline extended

HARRISBURG — The Dauphin County Conservation District this week announced an extension for placing orders for their 1981 annual seedling sale. The deadline for placing orders has been extended from Monday, April 6 to the following Monday, April 13.

Duayne Forsberg, Resource Specialist with the Conservation District, encourages interested individuals to place a pre-paid order before the April 13 deadline. This year a limited quantity of trees will be available for direct cash sales on April 25. However, certain species may not be available for direct sales.

To guarantee receiving your desired specie, Forsberg suggests placing an order before the supply of that specie is exhausted

Information and prices can be obtained by contacting the Dauphin County Conservation District at 75 S. Houcks Road, Suite #305, Harrisburg, PA 17109 or call their 24 hour "evergreen" line at 717/652-7073.

Seedlings will be available for pick-up on Saturday, April 25th between 9 a.m and 2 p.m. at the Colonial Park Plaza, inside the former Food Fair Store in southern Dauphin County and at Lykens Valley Plaza in Elizabethville in northern Dauphin County.

These trees are three and four year old bareroot seedlings Four species of coniferous trees averaging 12 inches in height and six species of deciduous trees averaging 20 inches in height are available.

The tree species are douglas fir, blue spruce, white pine, norway spruce, red oak, white flowering dogwood, white ash, black walnut, Russian olive and scarlet maple

Double yields

While such techniques can bring dramatic results, for maximum yields, new cultivars must be genetically engineered for a given region For, no matter how similar two areas appear, environmental factors vary significantly. Thus, high yielding wheats cannot be transferred successfully from England where, for example, less daylight makes for shorter plants, less prone to lodging

But developing new varieties requires at least a decade under the best of conditions," says Marshall.

"That's our long-term goal. Our immediate aim is to prove to northeastern farmers that, in a normal year with average rainfall, they can double their wheat, oats and barley harvests with existing varieties.

The Combine: first a miracle, now a necessity, but definitely Massey.

Mankind has been harvesting grain for many centuries, but we advanced all the way from the scythe to the first combine in a little over 100 years

Two companies, founded by Daniel Massey and Alanson Harris and now merged as Massey-Ferguson, had a lot to do with those advances in harvesting technology especially the evolution of the grain combine

Giant strides in mechanized harvesting.

Massey's reaper binder was an important step In the 1860's, they were saying that "it does more 'n eighteen hands does, and you don't have to cook nothin' for it neither "

But the developments that followed were even more significant In 1910, Massey introduced its No 1 Reaper Thresher that combined cutting, threshing and separating functions into a single horse-drawn machine

Over the next 28 years, improvements to Massey's reaper thresher led up to the combine as farmers know it today These improvements included powering the mechanism first with a gasoline engine and later with a tractor PTO, and the introduction of the rasp bar cylinder, a tremendous improvement in threshing efficiency

500 Massey combines lead charge of the "Harvest Brigade."

In the 1930's Tom Carroll, a Massey engineer recognized as the father of the modern combine, developed the prototype of the world's first successful self-propelled combine Massey introduced it in 1938

The new combine was just in time for World War II Some 500 units were used to form a "Harvest Brigade" following the ripening wheat from Texas to Saskatchewan — sweeping across a million acres to harvest 25 million bushels a season Supported by Massey technicians, the Brigade became an ongoing — and still mostly Massey — tradition that continues to this day

The corn combine fits into Massey's heritage, too The Schmidt brothers, Massey-Ferguson dealers in Ohio, put the snapping unit from a Massey corn picker on a combine and the result was a workable corn combine

One good idea keeps leading to another.

That's the way it's been, all through the evolution of Massey combines From hydraulic header lifts to all-gear final drives and from low-profile corn head design to the quick-attach header feature, the list of Massey innovations goes on and on

This non-stop improvement policy means the Massey combine you buy today is the most productive Massey combine ever You can be sure that, when there is a better way of harvesting, you'll find it in a Massey combine

So, see your MF dealer and check out the newest Massey combines, including the higher capacity MF 860 and 850 models now being introduced You'll be looking at 134 years of harvesting ideas, ready to work for you

Equal time

A letter which was printed in my last week's column generated a number of comments concerning the Leesport Auction.

I received this signed letter from Irvin W. Shirk, R1 Mertztown:

He writes.

I am writing in response to the anonymous letter printed in your column on March 28.

For one thing, the writer claims the auction ring wasn't cleaned for several weeks. That is incorrect, as my brother can verify because he cleans it out every week. (He is an employee). What the writer probably saw was fresh saw dust watered down to eliminate dust.

As for the fact that farmers buy heifer calves to take home, the calves are the first animals through the ring each Wednesday, followed by sheep and goats after which come feeder pigs. So, there are no "cripple or 90 percent dead" animals sold before calves or pigs being taken home.

Further more, a steer with his rectum hanging out or hogs with ruptures are probably no more carriers of viral diseases than are healthy looking animals.

I am sure most any farmer realizes there is a risk in buying animals from auctions to some extent and will isolate such animals for a period of time.

My own opinion of Leesport Market and Auction is it is one of the finest auction barns around.

And Leroy Weist, one of the owners and manager of the Leesport Auction stated

"We've run this auction barn for the past 33 years. If we didn't run it right, we wouldn't be here."

Weist went on to explain the auction voluntarily employs a private veterinarian to inspect the animals going through the barn He added, "There is some scrap livestock, but they are tagged and put in an isolation pen."

Dr Charles Baker, veterinarian for the Lansdale office of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's Bureau of Animal Industry, confirmed there is a licensed disease control technician inspecting the Wednesday auction

"As at any other auction, all sick animals that are brought in are sold for slaughter under permit — they wear red tags and are not sold through the ring. All quarantined animals that are brought into the auction are branded and sold strictly for slaughter," he said

Baker also pointed out there are few calves sold for breeding purposes at Leesport Auction, except during private sales So, he said no inspector checks health papers at the Wednesday auction since the calves are mostly week-old bull calf vealers.

And, he concluded, the dairy cows that enter the Wednesday sale ring are on their way to be cutters and canners

Animal rights: pros and cons

BY CURT HARLER

LANCASTER — 'There's a fox in the henhouse. His name is Dr. Michael Fox, and he doesn't have the welfare of animals at heart "

That's how John Fidler, manager of technical services for Pennfield Corp , summed up the status of the animal rights movement on Monday

Michael Fox is the leading spokesman for the animal rights or animal welfare movement, a group of people which says farm animals are not treated properly

Fox is, by most accounts, a charming and convincing speaker And he has a number of ordinary as well as powerful people who support his ideas .

The animal rights movement basically is a group of humans who are working for better conditions for animals The humans are deadly serious They're well-funded and determined to push their cause

Dennis White of the Humane Association of the United States describes the animal rights movement as divided into two groups, radical and mildly radical

"The radical animal rights activists will not tolerate any type of animal exploitation, experimentation, farming, killing or other areas where animals can benefit man, White told a recent meeting sponsored by the American Farm Bureau Federation

White says people in that group generally are pure vegetarians. The group is small, he admits, but is highly vocal and has the means and fortitude to bring its views to the general public

The mildly radical group also says animals have certain rights but recognizes that animals have been used for man's benefit for years

Most animal welfare advocates would agree that animal rights include freedom of movement to get up, lie down, groom normally and stretch their limbs

Animal rights activists take exception to modern, large scale farming practices which confine animals and don t allow them to roam on pasture or range

Factory farming is a key phrase heard in animal rights discussion. It is applied to large confinement operations.

Animal rights people say such farm practices cause livestock mental anguish and undue hardship

Veterinarian Jerry Appelgate dismisses those charges as anthropomorphism," or attributing to an animal human feelings and ideas

Animal rights people want you to think, gee, if I were a laying hen, would I like this'" he told a group of school teachers at a Pennfield-sponsored conference Monday.

The idea is supported by pseudo-intellectuals who are always a danger, he said, and by vegetarians.

Dr. Appelgate traced the evolution of agriculture from nomads herding animals to the coming of fences — the first form of confinement.

Economics of scale played a role in further specialization and centralization of agriculture, he continued.

All of this helped farmers make better use of land, labor, and capital, Dr. Appelgate maintains, with the result that America has the best quality food in the world at the lowest price

Is the animal rights movement actually going to throw a monkey wrench into this system'

Some members of the ag community believe it is and note steps in that direction already have been taken

John Fidler said some animals in Germany are sueing their owners with help from animal rights activists.

In Denmark the use of confinement poultry operations was outlawed until the Danes found they could not compete with the rest of the European Economic Community

The movement actually began in the United States in the early 1970s with laws to require better conditions for laboratory animals Then it spread to farms in Europe and is coming back to the United States

Fidler dismisses arguments that animals eat grain that could best be fed directly to people

He says such products as crab meal, feather meal, corn gluten, and even alfalfa hay are not human foodstuffs

Besides, he says, when competition for a particular grain for food increases its price, feed mills will turn to alternative, less desirable products for animal feed

What about the charges that animals deserve a degree of freedom'

John Skinner of the University of Wisconsin concedes animals in the wild need room to escape predators, find food, and find a mate, but he adds, domesticated animals have all those things provided for them

One of the best indicators of animal well-being that we have in both wild and confined situations is the reproductive rate,' Skinner says

'We have to remind people that you don't force production It is an animal's response to the conditions we provide for it The animal rewards us for what we give it and responds accordingly,' he concludes

Fidler would agree with Skinner Fidler notes that animals in confinement are better fed, are less prone to disease, are sheltered from the weather, and are protected from preditors

Are they any worse off than house pets kept in cages'" Fidler asks

Fidler leans heavily on the economic argument for confinement housing

Forty years ago, he points out, it took 12 weeks and 12 pounds of feed to produce a four pound bird for market

Today that same bird can be produced in seven weeks using just eight pounds feed

Fidler questions whether the consumer is willing to pay the extra money required to finance animals produced on range

He said a dozen eggs would cost triple what they do today if egg production were taken out of the modern laying house.

Dr Appelgate, too, agrees that supply and demand determine what ag products will be used and how they will be produced.

Generally, government has come to the rescue of oppressed or minority groups A number of animal rights activists would like to see government step in to help animals, too.

Harry Mussman, administrator of the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service of USDA says is not unlikely we will see legislation which would require farm animals to be treated kindly

If that takes place, the APHIS administrator said, it would be an enormous job for the governemnt to make sure animals had what he lists as creature comforts, freedom from pain, and the right not to be deprived of natural conditions

As administrator of APHIS, I would have great difficulty supporting that kind of thing, if for no other reason but budgetary," he says.

Mussman's alternative to government regulation is self-control

He says the industry should consider establishing proper guidelines for livestock production and care, and be in a position to defend current production practices.

Dr Appelgate, an industry representative, maintains there already are strong incentives to do just that

An animal under stress won't reproduce, is prone to sickness, and doesn't gain weight as rapidly as one which is treated properly, he would point out.

But the battle may have gone beyond that

Neal Black, president of the Livestock Conservation Institute, an organization active in promotion of livestock production and disease eradication, says the battle has been taken to our next generation, the little children in school

Like the Pennfield represen-

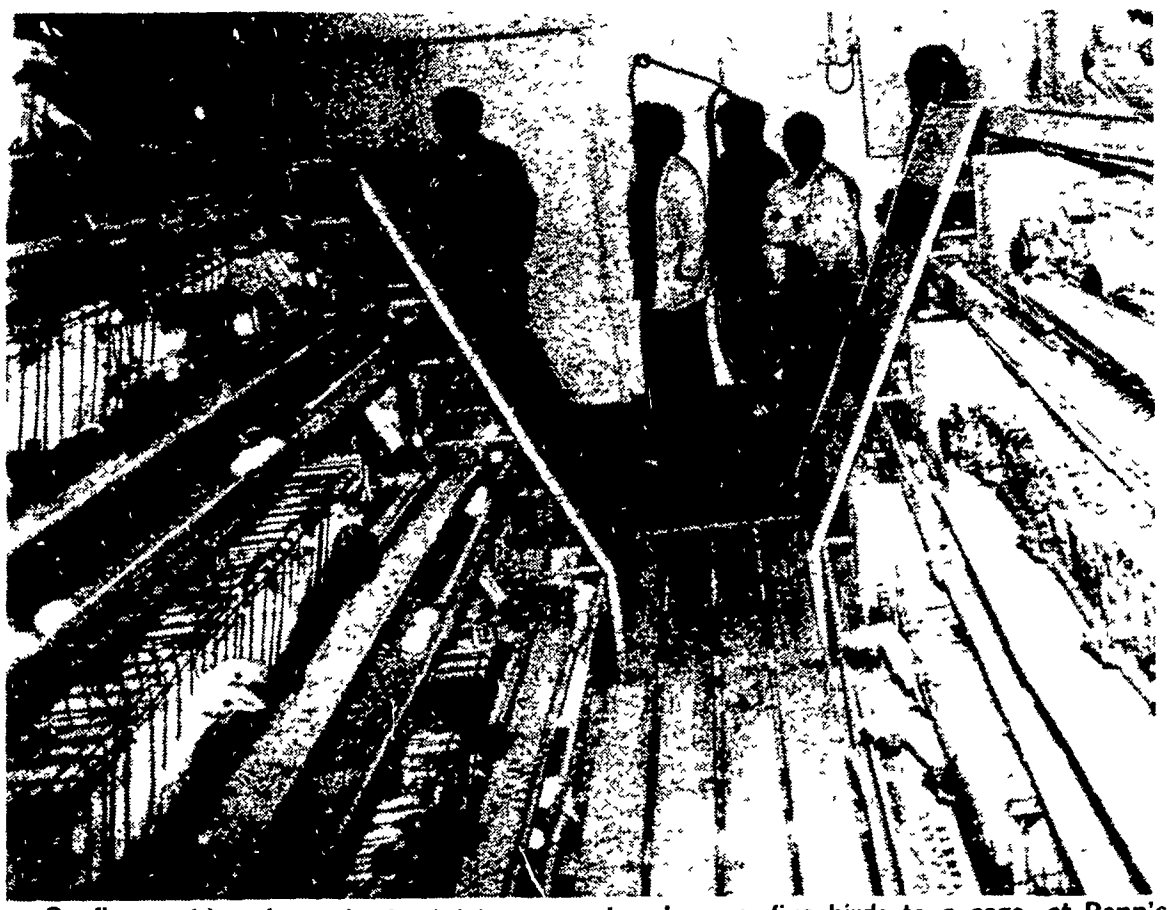
"...they will not tolerate any type of animal exploitation..."

...animals in Germany are sueing their owners...

"...if I were a laying hen, would I like this..."

"...are they any worse off than house pets kept in cages?..."



Confinement housing and animal rights were topics of discussion when a group of Lancaster County teachers visited the J. Harold Musser poultry operation. They saw 120,000 layers in two houses, five birds to a cage, at Penn's Peaceful Meadow Farm, R3 Mount Joy. Visitors found the Starcross Leghorns in good shape and laying at profitable rates.

Berks Holstein claims Futurity banner

A friend succeeds in getting both the attention of Penn-Springs Elevation Candi and Steve Kauffman Candi was selected for Best Udder in the Futurity and placed third in the class She is owned and shown by Robert Kauffman, Elizabethtown.

HARRISBURG – The top-placing 3-year-old in the 1981 Keystone Holstein Futurity, held Wednesday evening at the Farm Show Complex in conjunction with the 28th State Holstein Show, was a Berks County entry named W-S Linden-Loch Milu Sulee

One of the 50 head in the Linden Loch milking string, Sulee will be finishing her 2-year-old lactation milking around 18,000 pounds with about 550 pounds fat, according to Shaw Sulee s dam completed her 3-year-old lactation with a record of 33,000 pounds milk and 1200 pounds fat, earning her the classification Ex-91

In previous Holstein events, Shaw recalled Sulee ranked first in Junior Two-Year-Olds competition at the Eastern Championship Show held in Kutztown

The Shaws moved to Berks County from Hagerstown, Maryland in 1967

Trophy for Best Udder went to the third place 3-year old exhibited by Robert Kauffman of Elizabethtown, Lancaster County

Penn-Springs Elevation Candi, sired by the well-known Round Oak Rag Apple Elevation, freshened

tatives, he leaves one believing the animal rights people have gone too far, violating some unwritten set of rules in using psychological warfare against young, impressionable children rather than sticking to a debate based on raw facts

Black referred specifically to a pilot program in Minnesota

The program developed by the National Association for the Advancement of Humane Education, a division of the Humane Society of the United States, would have teachers ask children such questions as How many animals did you eat today'

Raised with that kind of philosophy, Mary and Johnny would no more eat a cow or a pig than their classmates, Black says

Fidler notes today s farm animals and birds are a far cry from the original animals from which they have evolved

It s like puting a nomad in an urban high-rise apartment,' he says, noting that the animals used in confinement operations are bred to thrive on that type of environment

"...Mary and Johnny would no more eat a cow or a pig than one of their classmates..."

Whereas their wild cousins would, he concedes, be quite upset in a confinement house, so too the domestic bird or animal would be at a loss in the wild.

I don t think animal and human values are the same, Fidler says

But the fact remains there is an active and well-funded group of people who would take issue with Fidler on that subject

They have vowed to do their best to see something is done to make animal living conditions better

The outcome of the conflict, while perhaps not the single most pressing matter confronting modern agriculture today, surely is one which will demand attention, time and money from farmers and ag industry if they intend to meet the challenge set down by the animal rights groups

Grangers push for casein quotas

HARRISBURG — While President Ronald W Reagan signed a bill canceling the April 1 dairy price adjustment, leaders from the Pennsylvania State Grange, on tour in Washington, D C , pushed for a ban on casein (artificial milk protein) imports

The State Grange delegation, totaling 50 persons, made a two-day tour of the Capitol City The purpose of the trip was for members of the 44,000-strong organization to meet with Pennsylvania Senators and Congressmen to discuss issues concerning farming and rural Pennsylvanaia.

At a Congressional Breakfast attended by representatives of the Congressional delegation, the following concerns were voiced —that legislation be introduced to ban imports on casein, a chemical substance used in artificial milk products costing farmers to lose $232 million each year;

—that tax credits be used as incentive for conservation work,

—that proposed cuts in the school lunch and special milk programs do not cause these programs to fall apart;

—and that Farmers Home Administration loans be geared toward young farmers starting out.

Representatives from the U S Department of Agriculture reported on the Rural Electric Assn loans and indemnity money for herd-depopulation due to brucellosis The Grange leaders also made a tour of the Department's Agricultural Research Center in Beltsville, Maryland

State Master Charles Wismer said this year's Legislative Tour was very successful

"We learned first-hand what is going on in Washington," he said "In turn, I think we got our ideas across to our Pennsylvania delegation " service activities, all point to the inevitability of larger cooperatives with a broad financial base for operations, he said

According to Allison, MCMP is looking in three directions for merger possibilities Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers, Inter-State Milk Producers and Dairymen, Inc

All three are farmer-owner milk marketing cooperatives

Noting that merger has been explored for several years, Allison emphasized, "We are not dragging our feet This is the most important decision we as members of MCMP have ever had to make I expect a board recommendation very soon

Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers has 1200 members with headquarters in Arlington, Virginia

The Cooperative operates a butter-powder processing facility at Laurel, Md , and a bottling plant in Virginia Their current membership intermingles with much of MCMP's milkshed.

Inter-State Milk Producers, of Southampton, Pa , includes over 3000 members, mostly in south-central and southeastern Pennsylvania They re equal partners with Maryland Cooperative in the Holly Milk butter-powder processing facility in Mt. Holly Spring. Members of the two cooperatives are intertwined throughout the southern tier counties of Pennsylvania.

Dairymen, Inc , is a Louisville, Kentucky, based cooperative, with over 6500 members across 14 southeastern states Their organizational structure operates in 11 divisions, and if a MCMP merger would take this direction, the Maryland Cooperative shippers would continue to function as the Maryland Division of D I

Much of D I 's milk is processed and sold through the fluid market under their own Flav-O-Rich label

Members also heard an upbeat report on the recent performance of the Holly plant, plagued since its opening over two years ago, with in-plant technical problems and environmental wrangling over the sewage disposal system

Holly, according to the cooperative's officials, was the salvation of area dairymen during the annual holiday milk-marketing headache And, according to MCMP treasurer LeRoy Norfolk, the plant is showing a million-dollar improvement on the financial books and operating at a break-even level

Even milk promotion has moved into the Space Age. Maryland Cooperative Milk Producer members came face to face with the flashing lights and synthesized voice of "Milky" the robot during their annual meeting Saturday. Milky's friend is Dave Baker, of the Mid-Atlantic Milk Marketing Agency.

Ohio farm wive and author Pat Leimbach was the featured speaker for the MCMP luncheon. Later, she autographed books for some of her fans in the audience.

Sam Foard, MCMP board member and vice-president of Holly Milk, told Maryland Cooperative members that the plant is now undergoing a major update of the sewage disposal system

Butter printing equipment was also recently purchased for the plant, and the 68-pound bulk chunks of butter produced at the facility are being cut and packaged in an agreement with Land-O-Lakes

Foard said that during the week between Christmas and New Year, when many bottling plants shut down for the holiday vacation, Holly handled some 20 million pounds of milk

That s the equivalent of 400 tractor-trailer loads that backed up in long lines to unload their stainless tanks full of milk because there simply was no place else to go

Approximately 14 million pounds of that production was processed at the plant, while the remaining six million pounds were reloaded onto trucks and hauled for sale at plants as far away as Minnesota

Calling the holiday milk glut a bad situation that would have been disastrous without Holly , Foard added that the first week of January became a repeat of the same problem

Continuing his annual report to the membership, Wessel said the Cooperative was supporting the April suspension in dairy price support increases

He admitted that, in the face of production costs up 11 percent and milk prices up only seven percent, the increase suspension was a tough stance to take, but escalating production and declining consumption demand the cutback

The Cooperative also urges passage of legislation aimed at slashing the imports of large quantities of casein, a chemical derivative of milk that is widely used in imitation cheese products Supporters of the limitations on casein had hoped to cut imports to half the quantities of the last five years

It looks like we ve lost this one for the time being, Wessel warned

Wessel, who s headed the Maryland Cooperative board for a dozen years, wrapped up his annual report by suggesting that perhaps the time has come for him to step down from office. The annual reorganization meeting is scheduled by the MCMP board on April 10

In other business, the Cooperative members got a glimpse of where their milk promotion dollars go and honored a retiree

Jesse McCracken received a plaque of recognition for retirement after fifteen years with the MCMP Equipment Division He began his employment with the cooperative as a warehouse clerk in 1965, and retired in January from his position in farm delivery service. Prior to his employment with the coopertive, McCracken operated a dairy farm at Cooksville, Md., and shipped to MCMP

Richard Norton, head of the Mid-Atlantic Milk Marketing Agency headquartered in Towson, briefed the dairymen on promotional activities geared to the Real Seal, a logo-label designed for consumer identification of foods made with genuine dairy ingredients

Real Seal will be kept before shoppers eyes with a program of advertising in conjunction with cooperating nationwide firms Promotions are already scheduled by Py-Co-Pay toothbrushes, Hershey s Cocoa, Foster Grant sunglasses and Tastykake.

Milk promotion nights are also lined up with both the Philadelphia Phillies and Baltimore Orioles major league baseball teams, and a Real-Seal sweepstakes will give away $10,000 in gold and a year's supply of groceries to a lucky game player

Reap between the lines.

Look how much more alfalfa you can save with an extra week of protection-from Furadan®.

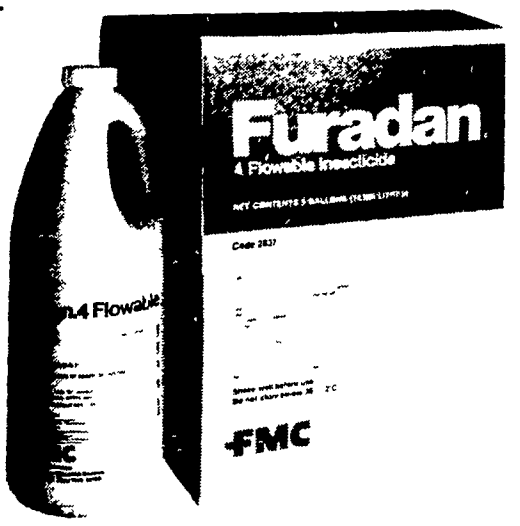
In its fourth week of regrowth, your alfalfa adds nearly 20% of its total tonnage. Or it can lose as much as 80% of total tonnage to insect attack.

Yet other insecticides, sprayed on stubble, don't protect your alfalfa through that crucial fourth week before cutting.

Only Furadan gives you an extra week of protection.
Systemic protection against potato leafhoppers, blotch leafminers, snout beetles (in New York), alfalfa weevils, grasshoppers, pea aphids and lygus bugs.

Take it from the top.
Get all the high quality hay your field can produce. Get the extra protection of a true systemic insecticide for alfalfa. Get liquid Furadan. It's easy to apply. (You can even tank mix it with fertilizer.) And when you put it down on stubble, you don't have to worry about wheel marks.

You can now apply Furadan 4 Flowable as often as twice per season. Check the label for application instructions. And find out what a difference our extra week makes. Ask your chemical supplier for Furadan. From FMC Corporation, Agricultural Chemical Group, 2000 Market Street, Philadelphia, PA 19103.



Furadan 4 Flowable is a restricted use pesticide.

400 attend Max Smith retirement tribute

by Sally Bair

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Smith, right, join with Ruth Smith at the dinner. Ken Smith, a Washington County dairy farmer, is Max Smith's brother.

"How nice it has been to have a job that pays me to do what I enjoy," Max Smith said. He said he tried to help people meet their problems and to set a good example in his work with youth.

A standing ovation was accorded Max Smith by the 400 friends and associates of the Senior County Agent during a dinner Sunday afternoon at the Lancaster Bible College.

Max Smith said he tried to please his wife, Ruth, and have a good home life; please the Penn State administrators, and please the people of Lancaster County during his tenure as county agent

The Extension Board presents Ruth Smith with a necklace in recognition of her support of county agriculture. Extension Association President Donald Hershey added his personal best wishes.

York Farmer's Association holds spring meeting

DALLASTOWN — York County Farmers' Association Spring Meeting and Banquet was held last Friday at Blymire's Church in Dallastown.

President Jack Dehoff welcomed over 200 farmers and state legislators

Dehoff recognized York County Farmers William Fleet, John Marsteller, II, Wayne Beshore, Lorne and Aileen Detter, and Charles and Dave Trout for their outstanding accomplishments in farming.

Al Myers, lobbyist for Pennsylvania Farmers' Association was the guest speaker. He told those present that without members, PFA is only a name.

He said, "that every farmer has the ability to participate in their government, from county to state. He pointed out that last year, agriculture had one of the best years in the General Assembly in Harrisburg.'

One of the top issues was Milk Security, 50 percent of the Association's members are dairymen.

Handlers went bankrupt and farmers didn't get paid. Act 104 was passed and now 85 percent of milk produced in Pennsylvania is covered.

A Bill passed on inheritance tax, requiring the value of the land to be based on the farmland value as computed for this Act and not on the market value, it must continue in agriculture for seven years

Truck weights increased, and further work is being done on language.

Myers also discussed some of PFA's top 10 issues for 1981 such as public schools financing, property taxes, unemployment compensation reform and others.

York County farmer, Ralph McGregor reported on the Harrisburg Tour attended by 443 farmrs' association members and 141 state legislators. He said that it was an impressive sight seeing that many farmers ascend the Capitol steps at one time.

Penn's Agri-Women plan business meeting

BY DEBBIE KOONTZ

LITITZ — Penn's Agri-Women was formed as a viable force for Pennsylvania farm women to speak up for farmers and present their side on the cost of food.

On Tuesday this organization will again be speaking as members meet for a business meeting at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center, Hershey

Starting the day will be registration at 9.30 followed by a brief description of one member's, Ehtel Gross', trip to Australia and New Zealand.

At 10·30 Donald E Rosen from Dupont will be speaking on "People vs Tests."

"He will be speaking on important legislative things happening at the state level in the way of chemicals," Gail McPherson, Pennsylvania Agri-Women president said

Over the noon luncheon, Dave Poorbaugh of Poorbaugh Grain will be speaking on, "Will the bulls or the bears rule trade?"

"Landuse Dilema" has been slated for the afternoon session. Speaking will be William Conn, senior planner of York County Planning Commission

Following Conn will be resolutions committee reports and adjournment at 3 p m

This meeting like all those of Penn's Agri-Women are designed to promote the interest of the farm. The main interest of the organization is to act as a public relations firm or an advertising agency for farmers; their argument being that other multi-million dollar businesses have firms to help them

Penn's Agri-Women's newsletters report that farm interests are so diversified that the farmers haven't been working together as they should and could. This organization intends to speak out, and to work together to encompass all phases of agriculture and agri-business

The newsletter goes on to say that as a state group, and part of a national group (American Agri-Women), members can better understand some of the complexities of agriculture in Pennsylvania by crossing commodity lines and geographic boundaries often found between farms, farmers and farm organizations

To educate and to inform is as always the main thrust of the Penn's Agri-Women's meeting Tuesday A $10 charge will be charged for lunch Reservations must be made in advance with Gail McPherson at 382-4878

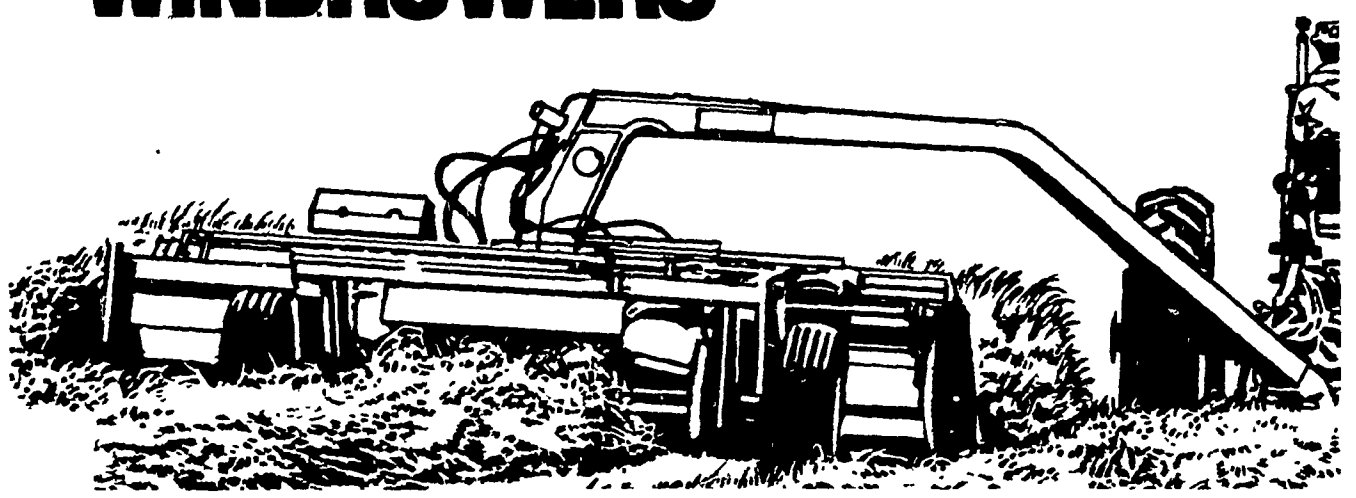
BEST OF BREED IN CENTER-PIVOT WINDROWERS



Hesston Hydro Swing® 1014

The original.

Hesston was first in the field with center-pivot design... with the 1014 Hydro Swing® auger header Windrower. It's the only one of it's kind with years of field-proven experience behind it.

- 1014 works to left or right of your tractor...and tows directly behind. Lets you cut around fields in any direction...or cut back and forth.
- Operates efficiently behind tractors rated as low as 50 PTO hp.
- All-hydraulic design has fewer mechanical parts...needs less maintenance.
- Non-intermeshing, 57" conditioner rolls handle hay as gently or as aggressively as you want. It's the only one to offer rubber-on-steel or steel-on-steel conditioner rolls.
- New swathing shield attachment lays down swaths up to 9' wide!

Hydro Swing is a registered trademark of Hesston Corporation

What's so special about Jacoba and her litter mates' Pedigree and production records

Moneymaker, her Gold Medal sire, is a son of Pawnee Farm Arlinda Chief, (classified Ex-94) with a TPI of +585

Jacoba's superovulated dam, Henry-Acres Elevation Joyce, is a Very Good daughter of Round Oak Rag Apple Elevation (Ex-96) Her lactation records are proof of the puddin" for Joyce As a 2-year-old she made over 20,000 pounds of milk — 23,763 pounds to be exact — in a 360-day lactation, giving 894 pounds fat Her record as a 4-year-old found Joyce milking 30,694 pounds milk with 1283 pounds fat This outstanding cow's index is +1868

Joyce has been the donor cow for both of the Henrys attempts at ET, explained Roy She was superovulated in December, 1979 with six Jemini calves being produced Joyce's next date with the ET technician came in February, 1980, with the nine Moneymaker calves, which included Jacoba, being successfully transferred

The Henrys have a father and son dairy operation in Port Royal, Juniata County They farm 200 acres of corn and alfalfa and milk 60 head of Holstein, seventy-five percent registered The rolling herd average for the farm stands at 19,580 pounds milk and 738 pounds fat

In addition to the three Moneymaker heifers he's already sold to Curti, Henry said he has sold the California dairy operation six of Joyce's ET bull calves — four Moneymakers and two Jeminis

That leaves six of Joyce's ET heifers left plus her natural calf sired by Arlinda Cinnamon, Henry calculated

John Howard of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association was doing some calculating, too He totaled the number of calves sold to be 199, bringing the average sale price to $1724 Out of those 199 head, almost half (99 to be exact) were purchased by out-of-state buyers These Keystone state Holsteins will be traveling to Wisconsin, Iowa, California, New York, Connecticut, Maryland, Utah, Idaho, Indiana, Georgia, Minnesota, Ohio, and Ontario, Canada

A Lancaster County calf, the second high-selling heifer consigned by Melvin Eby of Gordonville, will be moving to Parkerburg, Iowa With a prefix that will mark her heritage, Pequea Miss Wonderful, a daughter of Glendell Arlinda Chief, was sold to William Jungling for $6000

The top three buyers at the calf sale were Herbert Kallmann, Jewett City, Connecticut, who bought 18 head for $36,200, Engelbrecht & Marquiss, Waterloo, Iowa, who bought 15 head for $18,600, and Waltrick Farms, Columbus, Ohio, who bought 11 head for $16,450 —SM

Henry-Acres Jacoba-ET, one of a litter of nine Moneymaker calves, was purchased by a California dairy operation, Curti. Representing the buyer was Harold Hartt, left,. of Susquehanna. Consigning the heifer to the State Calf Sale was Roy Henry, Port Royal, and at the $8000 calf's halter is Pa. Holstein Association representative John Howard

Elevation daughter is high-selling bred heifer

HARRISBURG — The Pennsylvania Holstein Association's Bred Heifer Sale held Thursday at the Farm Show Complex was topped by an Elevation daughter consigned by Donald J Arthur of Laceyville

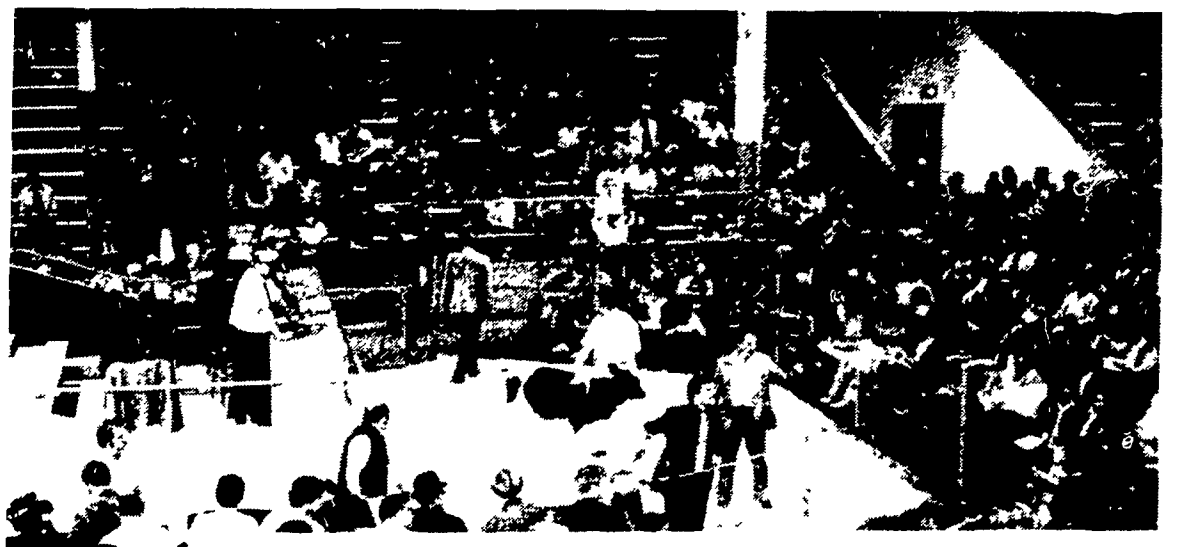
Revluc Thea, a fancy, stylish Holstein heifer, brought $5600 from Patti A Roudabush, Virginia This top-selling female is bred to S-W-D Valiant and is out of a Very Good dam, Revluc Leda

According to the Association's John Howard, the Thursday sale averaged $2479 for the 106 head that walked through the ring

Tied for the second-high-selling heifer honors was Willsholm Conductor Bess, consigned by North View Farm, Berlin She is sired by WAPA Arlinda Conductor, a son of Pawnee Farm Arlinda Chief, out of an Elevatron daughter classified VG-88 Bess was purchased by Jeffrey & Cynthia Shaffer and Delmar Brotfee & Sons, Millerstown, for $4600

H Landis Weaver, Quarryville, consigned his heifer, Wea-land Apollo Primrose, and sold her for $4600 to Howard J Hammond III, Corry This heifer is the daughter of Hilltop Apollo Ivanhoe, a son of the well-known Ivanhoe, out of a Very Good Bootmaker daughter

Top buyers at the Bred Heifer Sale were. Engelbrecht & Marquis, Waterloo, Iowa, who bought 16 head for $41,500, Sawtooth Farm, Twin Falls, Idaho, who bought 10 head for $24,950, and Harold and Charlene Burlington, Waterloo, Iowa who bought 7 head $12,500 -SM



"What'll you give for this black and white beauty?
Just one look says she's got style.
Keep those bids coming for this Holstein cutie,"
The auctioneer chants with a smile.

Moneymaker calf from an Elevation dam,
Her pedigree reads like gold,
At eight thousand bucks — the gavel waves in his hand,
Then it drops with a loud "She's sold."

Futurity winner

January 31 Her 2-year-old lactation record of 327 days finished up at 20,080 pounds milk and 757 pounds fat

Candi comes from a fine line of cows, said Kauffman proudly Her dam, Penn-Springs Admiral Cinders, is a homebred milking string team member at the Kauffman farm with a classification of Ex-90 Her 365 day lactation record as a 3-year-old finished at 25,711 pounds milk and 854 pounds fat

Candi's grand dam, Vital Astronaut Cinderella, wore a grand champion's banner many times, recalled Kauffman Classified Ex-94, Cinderella was turning in records over 31,000 pounds milk before she was sold two years ago

Second place in the Futurity and second best udder honors went to Millervale Model Impact, owned and bred by Edwin and Vera Miller of Millervale Farm, McDonald Calved November 22, 1977, the Holstein was sired by Mowry-K Double Impact, out of Millervale Astro Paulo Maud

Kenneth and Jane Benner of Millerstown exhibited the fourth place cow in the Holstein Futurity Santee-Acres Bootmaker Stylish is a Paclamar Bootmaker daughter out of Pennshill Star Sophia

And another Elevation daughter placed in the top five Adairland Sue-Ellen, bred by Robert Seidel and owned by Helen Seidel of Kutztown, stood fifth in the class of fifteen

Judging the Futurity sponsored by the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, were Neal Bowen Wellsboro and Donald Script Easton -SM

James Shaw, Oley, exhibited his 3-year-old to the championship in the 1981 Keystone Futurity W-S-Linden-Loch Milu Sulee stood at the top of her class of fifteen on Wednesday evening. Holding the champion's banner is Doug Hershey, director of membership services with the Pennsylvania Holstein Association to band together under their Legal Service Plan and organize groups, involving 500 or more acres, to negotiate better leasing terms with the companies or agents

Gas lease

"One example of a concern is the length of the lease," Prether said

"Our attorneys are recommending short-term leases, three years or less,"

It was reported from the Franklin County meeting on Monday that some farmers had been approached concerning leases covering as long as 10 years

Other areas of protection, with which the PFA is concerned, include bonus payments when the lease is signed, delay rentals that increase in the future, specific provisions for termination of the lease, dates for pipeline connections, agreement on location of rights-of-way, pipelines, wells and structures.

Also, protection of water supplies, farm buildings and agricultural uses of the land, damages for the repair of land surfaces, amount of royalty payments, indemnity clauses, rights to free gas, payments for gas storage rights, requirement of the lessee to purchase liability insurance and specific authority to clear the deed title when the lease terminates

DER suspends Sunny Farms permit

SEVEN VALLEYS — The Pennsylvnia Department of Environmental Resources notified Stabatrol Corporation, Norristown, Wednesday that the Department has suspended solid waste permits held by two of the firm's subsidiary corporations.

Suspensions of the Sunny Farms Ltd., North Codorus Township, York County, and Elwin Farms Inc., Franklin Township, Fayette County, permits came just 24 hours after DER ordered Lyncott Corporation, also a Stabatrol subsidiary, to close its landfill in New Milford Township, Susquehanna County

The March 31 administrative order to Lyncott also suspended the DER solid waste management permit held by that site since April 29, 1977. Five violations, three of them with water pollution potential, were cited in the Lyncott order.

While Lyncott had been operating its landfill since 1977, neither Elwin Farms or Sunny Farms landfills are operational. However, initial construction had begun at the Sunny Farms site for which the permit had been issued Dec. 17, 1979. The Elwin Farms permit was issued May 2, 1980.

DER suspended the Elwin Farms and Sunny Farms permits because design and technological plans for these two sites were the same as the design and technology employed at the Lyncott Landfill. Problems leading the the Lyncott closing and suspension are believed by DER to be symptomatic of the design, construction and operation of the landfill and could crop up in other areas similarly constructed and maintained.

The permits will be suspended until further notice

This is the first action taken by DER under 1980 Solid Waste Management Act provisions allowing the suspension of permits because of violations at another, related site.

Clifford L. Jones, DER secretary, said, "The suspensions represent a stepped-up enforcement effort against hazardous waste problems now available under the new Solid Waste Management Act"

Legislative roundup

Both Grieco and Burns chair sub-committees and both requested those assignments, rather than full chairmanships

Any of the 20 current chairmen could request a change to agriculture if they so desire, but they would have to give up their old seat, according to House Majority Leader Matthew J Ryan.

For instance, Walter F DeVerter, 82nd District Representative from McClure, a ranking ag committee member and ag leader, already holds chairmanship of the Insurance Committee

It is highly unlikely that current Vice Chairman Noah Wenger will get the top post Current lack of seniority, which kept him out of the chairmanship at the beginning of the term, will continue to preclude his being named chairman.

It is uncertain what Wilt's Senate committee assignment may be A post on the ag committee, or any other committee, will await his certification and his new, low seniority rating.

Meanwhile, other several items of interest to agriculture were brewing on the Hill

HB 800, a measure to amend and update the soil conservation laws, was reported out of committee

The bill will not have any startling impact on state conservation laws Rather, it will give the soil conservationists legal authority to do what they need to do to function properly

The most recent update of the Soil Conservation Act was completed in 1972

Pennsylvania's growing on-farm winery business stands to benefit from HB 357

It will ease the requirements of the Liquor Control Board by allowing limited wineries to have three outlets for wine sales in addition to the main winery

Under current regulations, a limited winery can sell wine only on the premises where the fermentation of the wine takes place

The measure, sponsored by Rep Harry E Bowser, North East, was reported out of the Liquor Control Committee

Pennsylvania Farmers' Association supports both HB 800 and HB 357

Grangers are pushing for a measure to establish higher fines for falsifying livestock health records

Currently, fines of $25 to $100 are provided for violation of the law, a level which Grange Master Charles Wismer calls "ridiculous"

While the fines may have been considered stiff in the early 1930s when the original bill was passed, Wismer said he would like to see a sterner fine of $10,000 imposed for violations.

Such a move would require amendment of the old Act's penalty provisions, but could leave the rest of the measure intact.

Two further items are in the wings, both relating to milk security Look for introduction of one or the other, but perhaps not both

The first measure would extend permission for the 31 processors in the Milk Security Fund to maintain $200,000 dairy bonding for another year since the new milk security fund does not have sufficient revenue to cover a major loss.

The alternative may require all dealers, including the 31 now in the security program, to have bonding.

At present the Fund's liability would be about $25 million if all 31 participating dairies went under owing 40 day's milk, or about $4 million if the largest contributor should fail.

There is hope for more participation in the Fund, though, when enrollment re-opens on July 1, 1981

The agriculture budget remains a sore point with most ag groups. Most question why agriculture will see no increase while other segments of state government are enjoying a 5.9 percent jump.

"This action is unfair," says PFA President Eugene Thompson

Although the Agriculture Department is singing the party line, saying it can live with the budget, Grange Master Wismer echoes Thompson, saying, "The budget shows no respect for farming's position as the state's second largest industry"

If sufficient strength and unity can be mustered a floor fight for additional ag funds is possible

Hallowell testifies on USDA budget

WASHINGTON, D C. — Pennsylvania Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell Wednesday told the House Subcommittee on Agriculture, Rural Development and Related Agencies that significant progress is needed in updating and streamlining our agriculture production and marketing methods and technologies during the 1980's.

Hallowell was in Washington testifying on behalf of the National Association of State Departments of Agriculture in relation to the proposed 1981-82 U.S. Department of Agriculture budget.

Hallowell said, "Rampant inflation, expansion of export trade and serious transportation and energy problems have all put tremendous strains on our traditional marketing system in recent years. Farm prosperity increasingly depends on a food marketing system that is modern, efficient and capable of adapting to rapidly changing circumstances."

Hallowell said that the Federal State Marketing Improvement Program has been helpful in accomplishing this goal, sponsoring innovative test projects which pioneer new approaches to food marketing.

"These projects are coordinated with the Agricultural Marketing Services' Marketing Research and Development Program for maximum effectiveness," he said.

During the 1980-82 fiscal year, 38 project applications from 18 states were received by USDA, ranging from improving the competitiveness of soybean exports to identifying unnecessary legal and regulatory impediments to the marketing of produce on small farms.

Pennsylvania's Farmer to Consumer Marketing Services, Inc. is one example of a pilot project being financed by FSMIP. The program is aimed at improving the marketing position of small farmers by giving them the opportunity to sell products from a warehouse to institutions, small stores and wholesale outlets.

Hallowell said, "Most states do not have the resources to undertake pilot marketing projects without the financial incentives provided via FSMIP. NASDA requested funding for the program at the 1980-81 levels of $1.6 million."

Hallowell noted that NASDA strongly endorsed the prosposed increase in the Foreign Agriculture Service's market development program. "Agricultural trade is a powerful weapon against inflation," he said

Last year, agricultural exports provided the nation with a record favorable trade balance of $23 billion. "This helped offset our purchases of foreign oil, automobiles and other imported non-farm products, and cut the nation's overall trade deficit in half."

He said that a prime goal of future cooperation between the Foreign Agriculture Service and the states would be to open export opportunities for producers and processors who have not been involved in export markets

Hallowell also testified on the importance of inspection programs to the states, to control meat and poultry inspections, and animal and plant health. "NASDA strongly supports the need for an increase in the APHIS Contingency Fund to meet emergency animal and plant disease, and pest control needs," he said

"Outbreaks of the past two years have shown that the current funding levels are inadequate. Unpredictable emergency conditions can result in significant damage to our agricultural resources, and contingency funding is often our only means for taking immediate action when such outbreaks occur."

He pointed to the importance of the brucellosis eradication program as another priority item and said,

"The successful eradication of brucellosis nationwide can be achieved through the improved procedures that include calfhood vaccination programs, testing of infected and exposed herds, use of quarantines and the paying of indemnities to cattle owners for animals destroyed.

"We have reached a critical point in the brucellosis program when increased expenditures are needed now if we hope to hold the ground we have won at great cost in past years," he said.

Hallowell said NASDA recognized the overriding need for fiscal restraint and stands prepared to "shoulder our fair share of the burden imposed by cutbacks."

But in discussing the meat and poultry inspection and FDA portions of the budget, he cautioned, "Cooperative programs get more results for the money, make possible better utilization of personnel and facilities, and give state agencies the flexibility to respond to local needs and policies."

Poultry production up, but prices remain strong

LITITZ — Prospects for reduced supplies of pork coupled with continued strong export demand for poultry and eggs are expected to keep first-half 1981 prices of broilers, eggs, and turkeys well above depressed levels of last year.

However, rising production costs will offset these price increases. Turkey and broiler output is likely to exceed last year's levels, while egg production may be about the same.

Egg production in 1981 will probably continue about the same as last year. Following negative returns most of last year, the number of young pullets entering the laying flock continues to trail 1980 levels, and the average age of the laying flock is older. Producers will probably keep the old hens in the flock to maintain output.

Egg production in the first quarter may be down 1 percent from a year earlier, because of one less production day in February, but second-quarter production may equal April-June 1980.

February egg prices in New York averaged about 71 cents per dozen, 10 cents below December, but 11 cents above February 1980. Prices may average 72 to 74 cents for the entire quarter.

Prices usually weaken in the spring However, reduced supplies of meat may limit the decline this year. Egg prices during April-June may hold near first quarter levels.

Broiler meat will continue to increase this year. In 1980, output in federally inspected slaughter plants totaled 11 billion pounds, two percent above 1979.

Weekly slaughter reports and chick placements suggest that January-March broiler output will be one to three percent above the 2.7 billion pounds produced in first-quarter 1980

Production this spring is expected to rise seasonally and continue about two percent above year-earlier levels.

The nine-city weighted average broiler price in February 1981 was 50 cents per pound, about 7 cents above last year

First quarter broiler prices may average seven to nine cents per pound above the 43 cents a year earlier. Bolstered by declining red meat supplies, broiler prices are expected to show a small seasonal rise, averaging in the low 50's during the spring

Even with these higher prices, many producers may still only break even.

Profitable operations in the last half of 1980 encouraged turkey producers to increase production for 1981. Weekly slaughter reports and production of poults indicate that first-half turkey meat output will be five to seven percent above the 897 million pounds produced in January-June 1980.

Wholesale prices in New York for 8-16 pound young hen turkeys declined from holiday levels but are now above last year. Prices averaged about 60 cents per pound in February, up from 58 cents in 1980.

First quarter prices may average 59-61 cents a pound, slightly above last year's 59 cents. Even with increased production, turkey prices during January-June are expected to average 60 cents a pound, because red meat supplies will be declining.

Pork Council urges full research funding

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Speaking before the Senate Appropriations Committee, Ritchie Jordan of Suffolk, Virginia, Chairman of NPPC's Legislative Committee and Jack Rundquist, Butler, Illinois, Chairman of NPPC's Research and Education Committee strongly urged full funding of animal agriculture research projects

"We are pleased to see even modest increased in funding for basic research," said Rundquist. "Investments in creative, innovative research are truly investments in the future. We hope that a substantial portion of the overall increase for basic research will be allocated to swine."

While the Council was pleased with some of the increases in funds for the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, it expressed alarm that pseudorabies was not addressed in the budget.

"We cannot understand the proposed decreases in swine disease surveillance and pseudorabies," Rundquist told the Committee.

Psuedorabies is a herpes virus disease for which eradication is being discussed. NPPC advocates more research on vaccines and tests for infected animals and more epidemiological work before any eradication program is attempted.

Jordan and Rundquist strongly suggested Congress reinstate at least $6.5 million to the cooperative research program. "For this research to be meaningful and useful, the researchers must be able to depend upon renewed funding to conduct their ongoing projects," added Rundquist.

Both men commended the President's efforts to bring inflation under control but emphasized that agricultural research is one of the basic tools of all farmers and necessary if farmers are to feed the ever growing U.S. and world population.

NPPC made similar ppoints in testimony offered Tuesday before the House Appropriations Subcommittee.

Pa. Plowing Committee urges conservation

YORK — The Pennsylvania Plowing Contest Committee, organized to promote good soil stewardship, has a reminder for farmers as they plan for the 1981 planting season.

"Think soil conservation when planning crop sequences," is the suggestion they're sending out to the Commonwealth's farmers.

In spite of current low moisture levels, the Committee asks growers to keep in mind the likelihood of periods of excess water, when runoff will have to be diverted safely from the fields.

According to the Plowing Committee, probably the most abused conservation practice today is the lack of sod waterways, one of the most successful methods in use to safely carry excess water from fields

Due to Federal concern for clean streams and economic benefits to all farmers, the state's plowing enthusiasts ask each farmer's help in keeping erosion to a minimum.

Soybean growers demand end to embargo

LANCASTER — The Soviet grain embargo has denied U.S soybean growers a $500 million market and should be lifted immediately according to American Soybean Association President Frank Ray.

"It's obvious the Soviet embargo has failed," Ray said in a letter to President Ronald W. Reagan

"Soviet troops remain in Afghanistan The Soviets have been able to import all their needs Other food exporting countries have taken advantage of our embargo and are freely shipping grain and soybeans to the Soviets."

Ray, a soybean grower from Baker, Florida, told President Reagan that the embargo discriminates against soybean producers.

"Because of our reliance on free trade, soybeans are not included in the Soviet grain agreement," he said. "As a result, the embargo has been complete and unlike corn and wheat farmers, we've not been able to sell any soybeans to the Soviets

"While it's difficult to calculate direct costs, soybean farmers have lost a market valued at more than $500 million during the last full year of normal trading "

The soybean leader says soybean farmers have not forgotten Reagan's campaign pledge to lift the embargo

"We've patiently waited for you to fulfill your campaign statements," Ray said "You and your advisers have had 60 days to consider all the facts The continuation of the Soviet embargo only encourages U S. soybean farmers to abandon their free trade principles and join other farmers in asking for government handouts and price supports "

In a speech before former President Carter announced the grain embargo, ASA Chief Executive Officer Ken Bader projected the Soviet Union would become the largest U.S. soybean market His speech noted the Soviets would purchase more than $1 billion of soybeans and soybean products by 1985.

"The longer the embargo continues, the more damage it creates for U S. soybean farmers," Ray says.

"The Soviets are developing trade ties with Argentina and Brazil as a replacement for U.S soybeans, soy oil and soybean meal. For example, the Soviet Union will purchase 60 percent of this year's Agrentina's total farm exports.

"These trade ties encourage South American farmers to increase their soybean production and will ultimately reduce profits for U S. soybean farmers "

Ray says another result of the embargo is loss of profits for U.S soybean processors which means lower prices for soybean farmers.

He noted soybean processing plants in Europe and Brazil are running at full capacity while those in the U S. are only 75 percent utilized

"We deplore the Soviet Union's imperialistic activities in Afghanistan, Poland and El Salvador," Ray said.

"A food embargo obviously does not counter Soviet aggression, it only penalizes American farmers We urge you to replace the impotent embargo with some other signal to the world that the U.S. will take strong and direct action to counter Soviet aggression.

"In restoring trade with the Soviets, you will be able to use their currency to improve our economy and balance of trade situation," he concluded.

New Jersey meat plant loses inspection services

UNION CITY, N J — The U S Department of Agriculture will withdraw meat inspection service for 30 days from a Union City, N J , packing company became of felony convictions against the firm and one of its officers

The firm, Toscony Provision Co , Inc , can not process meat products without Federal meat inspection

Service will be withdrawn April 4 unless Toscony appeals the decision to the USDA Judicial Officer

Donald L Houston, Administrator of USDA s Food Safety and Quality Service, said the decision also orders Henry Dei, the firm's president, to completely separate himself from the company or it will face indefinite withdrawal of inspection

Houston also said if the firm violates any provision of the Federal Meat Inspection Act within two years - involving the preparation, sale, transportation or attempted distribution of any adultered or misbranded products - inspection service may be withdrawn indefinitely

In 1979, the firm and Dei were convicted in the U S District Court for the District of New Jersey of a felony for knowingly distributing adulterated meat products

The Federal Meat Inspection Act requires all meat products sold in commerce to be wholesome and properly labeled

Pest control research needed to contain production drain

WASHINGTON, D C. — Adjustments in federal pest control research policies are mandatory to help restrict U S agricultural production losses currently estimated at $35 billion a year, a leading spokesman for the agricultural chemicals industry said last Friday

The need for pest control research and extension in agriculture is of paramount importance since pests continue to cause farm production losses equal to 30 percent of the total sales value," Jack D Early, President of the National Agricultural Chemicals Association, said in testimony before the House Committee on Agriculture s Department Operations, Research, and Foreign Agriculture Subcommittee

Pests that are inadequately controlled, he added, can diminish the potential value of otherwise significant advancements in production technology in crops, livestock, forests and aquatic resources.

Early told the panel current government regulations constrain agricultural research scientists by diverting them away from their essential activities to provide defensive information for products whose value has already been demonstrated

There is an obvious need for readjustment and realignment of research efforts nationally,' he said, and such readjustment must include reemphasizing the effective and efficient use of agricultural pesticides as a principal ingredient in pest management programs

He cautioned the panel that such pest control strategies as Integrated Pest Management should not be studied as separate entities but in the context of pest control needs in a total crop production system

The NACA executive said that the industry supports increased research for application technology, basic research in [illegible] processes of [illegible] that could be exploited for control purposes, cooperative research assistance from state experiment stations and extension services for determining potential pest control value of new materials, and crop loss research for allocation planning of resources in developing pest control strategies

NACA is a non-profit, Washington-based trade association whose 115 members make or formulate virtually all the crop protection chemicals used in the United States and a large percentage used abroad

Beware of unlabeled seed bags

HARRISBURG — Seeds are the least expensive part of your future crops - but without good seeds, you may not have any crop.

Pennsylvania Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell noted that at this time of year, numerous ads appear in newspapers offering seeds for sale by farmers and other individuals

It you buy any of these seeds, be sure that they have been tested and properly labeled,' the Secretary said

According to the State Seed Act of 1965, all seeds that are sold or offered for sale must be labeled, he added

The label must tell the buyer the percentage of pure seeds the bag contains and the percentage of seeds that will sprout It should give information on the percentage of weed seeds present

Seed labels and tags are for your protection," Hallowell said. Reading and studying the analyses printed on seed tags will help you obtain an idea of what to expect come harvest time "

Anyone finding unlabeled seeds for sale is asked to contact the Agriculture Department's Bureau of Plant Industry, 2301 North Cameron Street, Harrisburg, PA 17110, or to call 717/787-4843.

Growers renew potato research program

HARRISBURG — Pennsylvania Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell Wednesday announced that state potato growers have approved a referendum to continue the state's potato research program for another five years

Hallowell said that during the referendum period, March 6 to 19, 86 percent of the growers voted in favor of continuing the program and 14 percent opposed it A two-thirds majority vote was required for the referendum to succeed, he noted

As a result of the vote, the rate of assessment, which applies to producers with 25 or more acres of potatoes for sale, will remain at one percent per hundredweight of potatoes sold

Hallowell said the income from the assessments will be used for varietal research to develop improved varieties of potatoes adapted to Pennsylvania growing conditions

With transportation costs for potatoes rapidly increasing, development of new and improved varieties for Pennsylvania could provide major dividends both for growers and consumers, Hallowell said I am please that our Pennsylvania growers have recognized the importance of research to both production and marketing

The teller committee for the referendum consisted of three potato producers appointed by Hallowell They were John Epler of Northumberland, Northumberland County, Noah Kreider, Jr of Manheim, Lancaster County, and George Wolf of Stewartstown, York County

WHAT YOU NEED IS A KRAUSE ROCKFLEX DISC

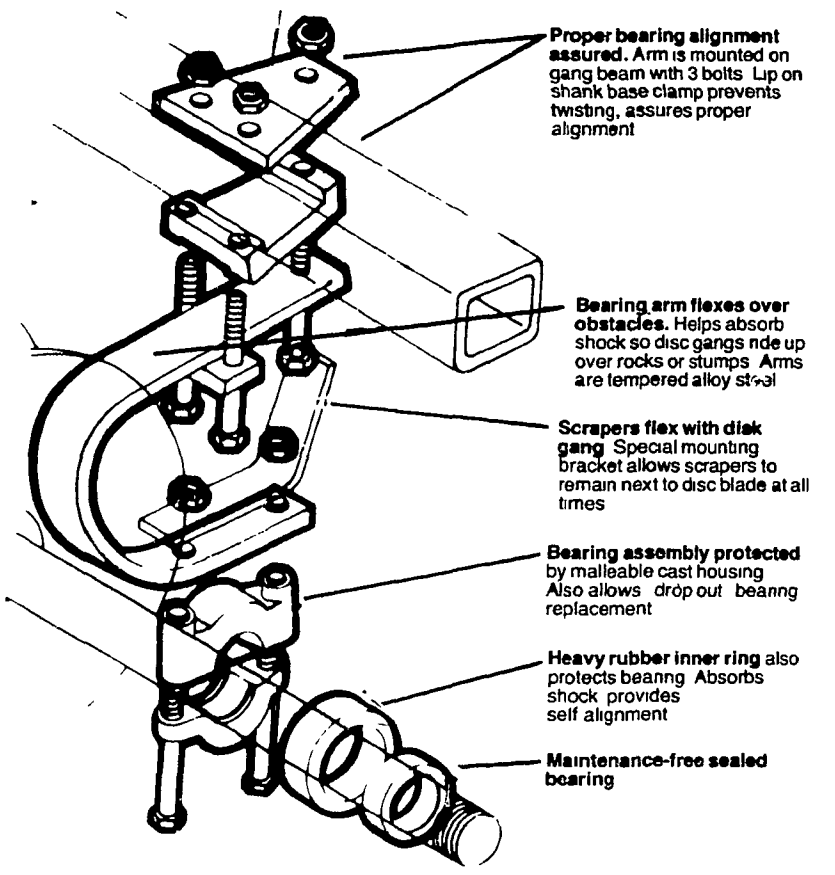
WHY?

BECAUSE OF KRAUSE SUPERIOR "ROCK-FLEX" BEARING ARM

AND HERE'S WHY IT MEANS GOOD NEWS FOR YOU!

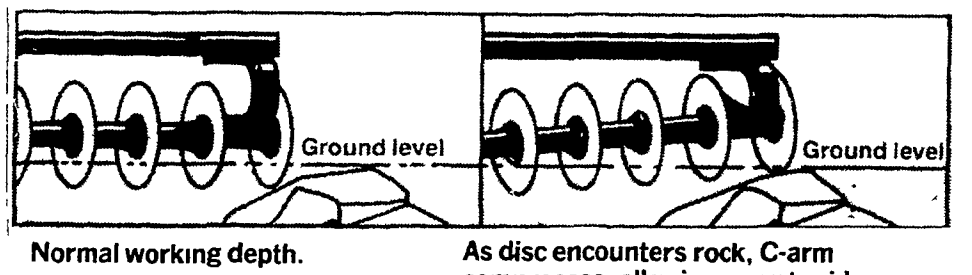
Unique C-shaped bearing arm:

- Flexes over obstacles
- Protects disc blades from breakage
- Protects tie rods from bending
- Protects spools from breakage
- Absorbs shock — minimizes bearing wear
- Improves trash clearance



Proper bearing alignment assured. Arm is mounted on gang beam with 3 bolts Lip on shank base clamp prevents twisting, assures proper alignment
Bearing arm flexes over obstacles. Helps absorb shock so disc gangs ride up over rocks or stumps Arms are tempered alloy steel
Scrapers flex with disk gang Special mounting bracket allows scrapers to remain next to disc blade at all times
Bearing assembly protected by malleable cast housing Also allows drop out bearing replacement
Heavy rubber inner ring also protects bearing Absorbs shock provides self alignment
Maintenance-free sealed bearing

A Krause innovation! The "Rock-Flex" bearing arm was invented by Krause in 1965.



Normal working depth.

As disc encounters rock, C-arm compresses, allowing gang to ride up over obstacle.

This Husqvarna is the work of one design engineer.

He spends a lot of time engineering it And a lot more time out in the woods working with the prototype He may decide it needs to go back to the drawing board

When he s satisfied himself—he s satisfied the toughest critic he has

That s why the Husqvarna chain saw you buy will exceed your expectations Because it s not created by the compromise of a committee it s built on the integrity of one man

Pennsylvania Holstein Association

Stump, Hostetter named Distinguished Junior Members

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

To encourage and recognize their outstanding young dairy members working with purebred black and white cows, the Pennsylvania Holstein Association annually honors two youths selected as Distinguished Junior Members.

This coveted honor is based on the junior members' accomplishments with breeding and exhibiting of registered Holsteins, school, community and church leadership, a scrapbook which includes the member's own story, and personal interviews.

At a time when youth are sometimes labeled immature and irresponsible, the 1981 Distinguished Junior Members, Debra Stump and Alan Hostetter, exemplify all that is right with American young people.

Debra Stump is the daughter of Berks countians Mr. and Mrs. John Stump, Stumpland Farms, Bernville.

At age ten, Debbie's fondest dream was to have a horse.

"But if a horse was not forthcoming, I decided I might as well accept a calf," wrote Debbie in her Holstein story. Later, she realized what a wise decision she had made.

A belated birthday, gift, "Molly," the little March heifer, came into Debbie's life. Again the following year, Debbie was allowed to choose another calf. Carefully studying her father's records on the various dams and their production, she selected a heifer named "Nelida."

At freshening, Molly presented Debbie with a heifer calf. In 1973, she continued expanding her herd with a purchased cow from the Stump's top cow family, and two years later purchased the maternal sister.

These animals were not just an increasingly valuable economic investment to Debbie. They were her friends, whose affections saw the young teen through the difficult days of adolescence.

"There were many times when I would go alone into the barn, wrap my arms around the neck of my calf while I cried my heart out, until her soft brown eyes and loving pink tongue succeeded in convincing me that someone still did love me When humans didn't understand, animals did," Debbie confides in her Hosltein history.

Today, Debby has 21 animals in her own herd, 15 of them bred in her name. But the herd expansion has not always progressed smoothly. In fact, Debbie has faced disasters that would try the patience and understanding of any dairy farmer

When "Molly" delivered a bull, Debbie decided to raise him for sale as a sire. One day the young bull leaped the fence in a moment of exuberance, breaking his leg in two places. Against her vet's recommendations, Debbie insisted the leg be set

Eventually, the breaks mended, and although the bull always walked with a limp, her optimism paid off. The young sire was put to use in the Stump herd, and later another dairy farmer purchased him.

Alan Hostetter has won numerous awards in the showring, including honors for fitting and showmanship. He takes special pride in this Excellent Bootmaker daughter, named to high honorable mention as an All-Pennsylvania two-year-old

As manager of the Stumpland herd, Debbie Stump is in charge of the daily milking, sire selection and insemination, health care, and record-keeping.

But another bull was not nearly so fortunate. Neighbor children firing BB guns accidentally shot the bull in the testicle. He was permanently injured and had to be sacrificed to auction, instead of a sire program.

One more of Debbie's bulls, sired by the popular Betty Chief, fell victim to an almost impossiblity: he drowned in a watering trough.

Molly's first heifer calf also developed problems of her own. "Robbie" picked up that most dreaded of heifer habits - she nursed her herdmates. Though a preventive device temporarily solved the problem "Robbie" went right back to the bag habit when the restrainer was removed.

"Soon after she freshened, we decided either 'Robbie' or her tongue had to go," Debbie relates. "The removal of a small portion of the heifer's tongue, an operation that had been performed on her grandam nine years before, solved the problem and she settled down to become a respectable member of the herd."

Her calf, however, had been born weak, the result of a twisted uterus that prevented normal calving. At nine days, Debbie found her newest herd addition dead, victim of an apparent virus which poisoned ner blood system

And still another close call came during the summer of 1978. When "Molly's" fourth heifer calf began to bloat, the illness was diagnosed as a toxic reaction from some type of poison weed Although the vet gave the heifer only a narrow one in ten chance of pulling through, the animal clung to that thin thread of life Nursed tenderly with Debbie's love, antibiotics and extra doses of vitamins, the calf pulled through and regained its strength within a few months.

Then, when this heifer freshened with her first calf, she again became ill But this second time the stress on her system was too much and the animal died.

Experiences, the joyous and the tragic, have given Debbie a great maturity and sense of responsibility. When she graduated in 1977 from Tulpehocken High School, she faced the reality that there was really only one thing that she wanted to do.

So Debbie Stump, new high school graduate, took over management of the family's Stumpland dairy herd.

With help from her younger sister, Donna, and sometimes her dad, Debbie milks the cows with the milkers maintaining a herd average of over 16,700 of milk and 620 of fat.

She is in charge of all registration and transfer records, keeps up-to-date pedigree information on hand, and has current information on each cow posted above the animal.

Three years ago, Debbie completed an artificial insemination course, and she selects all the matings and does the routine insemination work. All of the herd health care is also under her management

"Well, she does let me do the field work," quips her father. The Stumps crop over a thousand acres in corn, hay and small grains

Debbie has successfully exhibited her registered animals for several years at local and state shows, is a Berks 4-H dairy leader, active in the Dunkard Brethren Church and headed up the Junior Holstein Association's calf drawing fundraiser at the February annual convention.

A recently-acquired 310-acre farm owned by the stumps has become the next focus of Debbie's farm career She will marry in June, and she and her husband will continue working for the Stump family for fifteen months, while the purchase animals to form their own herd. The following fall, the young couple will move to a new farm and begin their own dairy operation

Alan Hostetter is the son of Mr and Mrs Dale Hostetter, Annville R2. He's part of Dale-Pride Holsteins, the family's Lebanon County partner ship that includes two older brothers and about 300 head of dairy animals, 120 of them in the milking herds

As a small boy in grade school, Alan was already taking care of chores in the family's dairy business His jobs focused on tending the baby calves and helping to feed hay to the milking herd.

"My brothers and sister all had calves, so it was natural that I would want one too," is Alan's explanation of his beginnings as a registered Holstein owner.

A daughter of Admiral Imperial Chief was his very first animal, transferred to his ownership for 4-H dairy project use. That modest start has multiplied and grown until today Alan owns 13 animals, 7 of them bred in his name.

Bootmaker twins from that Chief daughter have become two of his most valuable herd members, with one projected to 21,000 of milk and other to 22,000, as three-year-olds One of these twins has also dropped another valuable herd addition, a heifer calf by Paclamar Astronaut.

One of Alan's Bootmakers is scored Excellent and had been selected High Honorable Mention All-Pennsylvania two-year-old in 1979

Alan also mentions a cow he purchased some years ago from his father for use as an FFA project, an animal sired by one of the Dale-Pride homebred bulls. At seven years, she's scored VG-68, with five lactations all over a 4.5 percent fat test, one over a 5 percent test. A steady 20,000 producer, she's completed a 305-day record with 970 fat and is projected to top the 1,000 fat barrier in a 365-day record.

Five years ago, Alan added a touch of color to his herd with the purchase of a red and white animal at a state sale. A daughter of "Romandale Royal Red," the animal has been exhibited by Alan numerous times in FFA competitions

Exhibiting his cattle is one of Alan's greatest joys in the dairying industry

"To me, showing is a sport and I take it all as fun I feel that competition is the best key to improvement and that it is a great experience to have You meet many people and make new friends that cannot be forgotten," Alan wrote in his Junior Holstein story

The love of cattle shows and judging has given Alan another definite goal in his dairy career.

"Someday I want to study to judge cattle shows," he says. "I love giving reasons,"

His ability to judge and confidence in giving reasons won Alan the first place spot in state FFA dairy judging a few years ago Those speaking talents also earned him a slot on the state winning parliamentary procedure team

Having earned his Keystone Farmer Degree in the FFA program, Alan is now applying for the pestigious American Farmer Degree. He's a 1978 graduate of the Annville-Cleona chapter of the FFA, and was named the eastern region star farmer that year.

Some of Alan's feel for judging dairy cattle, he figures, came from working with a second operation of the Hostetter's, where they deal in cattle Several herds, plus up to 500 head of Wisconsin cows, annually pass through this commercial sales barn, with most of the cows being calved out and sold after freshening.

While Alan admits he doesn't become emotionally attached to these commercial cows as he does to the family registered individuals, he does credit the numbers of animals worked with as giving him background in the evaluation of a cow's true worth.

Sire selection is another interest of Alan's Dale-Pride leans heavily on the Sire Summary reports in selecting bulls for use on the cattle Top preference goes to sires with a plus proof of at leas one thousand milk and a plus on type Bulls under this level, but with high butterfat proofs, may win an exception Astronaut, Pacemaker, Valiant and Glen Valley Star are frequently used in the current mating program.

Now in complete charge of the heifer raising on the farm, Alan grows about 75 heifers annually for herd replacements, plus a few bulls for sales, possibly some to the export market. Heifers are fed a 20 percent protein ration, plus all the good quality hay they'll consume.

"I feel the young stock need as much attention as the older ones, because they are the future herd members," he's convinced

Alan ha- also taken over management of the herd feeding program, which has been converted to a Total Mixed ration He works closely with a nutritionist to balance feed nutrients and quantities for individual cows Cows are fed at the bunker for 50 pounds of production, and higher producers get an extra ration of grain in the barn Alan's methods speak well for his feeding techniques; the herd average is at 18,000 of milk and 700 of fat

"Although farming may seem a hard road to travel, one cannot always look at the financial outcome," is how Alan says he sees his chosen career. "You have to look at the feeling of accomplishment and satisfaction which comes from hard work "

As Pennsylvania's Distinguished Junior Member winners, Debbie and Alan's scrapbooks will now be entered in the national competition Winners of the national awards will be announced at the annual Holstein Convention, to be held in Baltimore in late June

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

As another season of gardening approaches my thoughts turn to preparing the soil for planting.

The lime and fertilizer have been carefully distributed over the ground and now I need someone to till it for me. In years past, my husband used his tractor and plow but since we have a brick smokehouse in the middle of the garden, it was difficult to work the soil properly.

The first man I contacted to do the job said it would cost one hundred dollars. That price I considered too high even if I do have a large garden. So I asked another man, who quoted a lower price, but he couldn't do it for several days. And, when the soil is dry enough, I am impatient and want the work done immediately But I guess I must wait my turn

My father had an interest in trees, plants and weeds and often told me their names He even collected some weeds to make a tea for his sick calves

Through the years I've taken many walks through the fields and woods on our farms with my sisters and later with my children Even so, I was pleasantly surprised to get a letter from my sister thanking me for teaching her to appreciate nature.

Apparently, many people are not very knowledgeable as to how food grows. To them a plant is a plant and a radish is the same as a horseradish When we share strawberries with teachers at school, they sometimes ask my children how many bushes have we?

And, recently I read in a local, dairy newspaper an account of farmers having a bad year as their peanut trees did not bear a good crop I realize that some fruits and vegetables are unusual - but strawberries and peanuts??

There is a lot of labor involved before food arrives at a supermarket and growing it does impart information that others don't have.

Everybody loves bread

A few bread recipes can be made in so many different ways; doughnuts, rolls, bisquits, pizzas, muffins, casseroles, breadsticks, cereals, sourdough and many types of baked loaf bread.

Fruits go well in baked bread and bread goes well with any main course. Bread is high in vitamins and is itself, if you remember your nutrition charts, one of the four main food groups.

Bread is a good food to make on a rainy, lazy day of which spring if full. So try a food from your favorite member of the bread group and treat your family too.

QUESTION - I would like a recipe for old time opera fudge. Can anyone help me?

Mary Bow, R1 Box 829, Annville, PA

QUESTION - I have two requests. We are hoping to raise some Guinea Fowl this spring. Does anyone have recipes using guinea fowl? Also, has anyone noticed how the price of shake and bake has sky-rocketed? Does anyone have a recipe to make shake and bake for pork?

Mrs. Leo Barsnica, Box 217, R1, Neshanic, Station, NJ

QUESTION - I obtained a recipe last month from the Home on the Range section called "Strawberry Crunch Cake." Would you please verify if the ingredients were in the proper amounts as mentioned in the paper? My friend and I both made it and it didn't turn out right for either of us.

Aileen Swierczynski

ANSWER — Yes the amounts were correctly printed as we received it. The recipes came from Barbara Russell, R1, Box 265, Pine Bush, NY 12566. Perhaps she could offer some advice and little hints on how she makes her cake come out correctly.

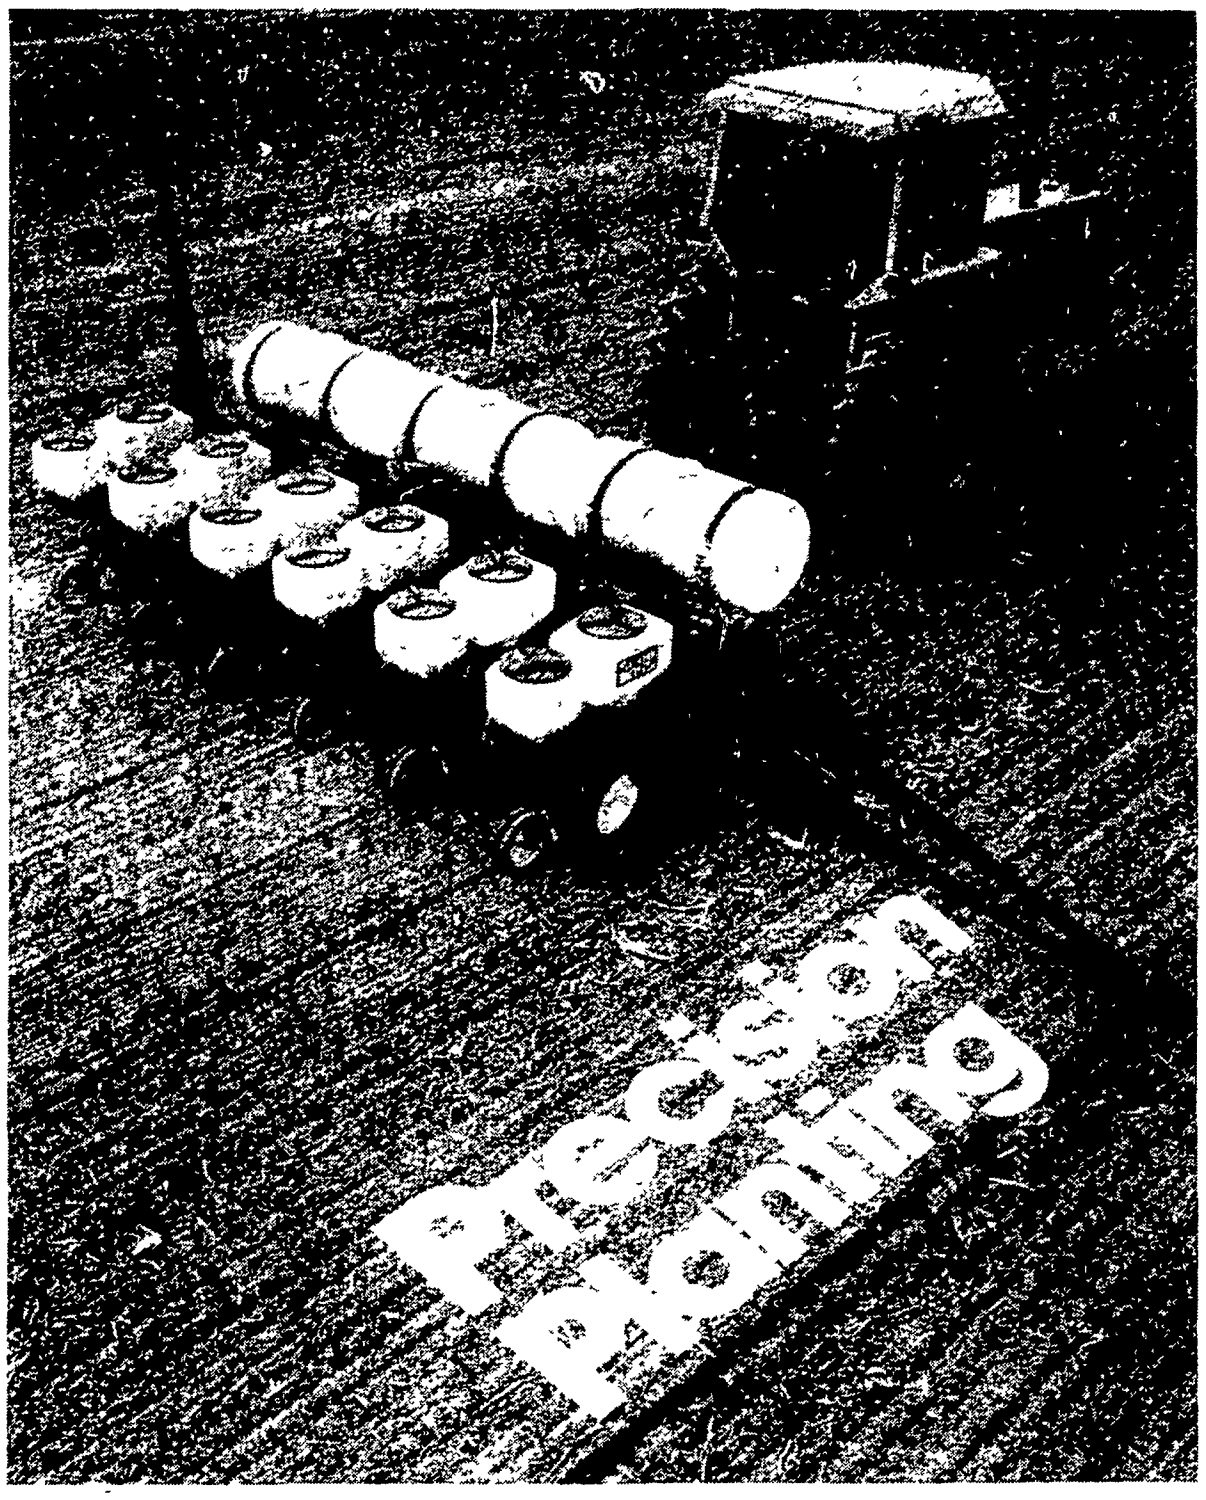
The White 5100 Seed Boss... A Breakthrough in Planting Accuracy



ACCURACY

The new White® 5100 Seed Boss™ Planter represents a breakthrough into a new era of accuracy. Accuracy that can payoff with increased germination, better stands and higher yields for you.

Exclusive new dual depth gauge wheels with walking-beam linkages allow both wheels to act with complementary action. So when one gauge wheel goes over a large clod or rock, the other remains in contact with the seedbed. As a result the height of the two wheels is averaged and the double-disc opener raises only half the height of the obstacle. Gauge wheels on competitive models act in tandem causing the seed disc opener to raise the full height of the obstacle. The White payoff . . . greater seed depth accuracy.

More gentle seed handling with a new pressurized metering system adds greater uniformity in seed spacing. A central blower provides constant air pressure to each metering unit. (Individual row blowers on 4-row models). Air then "holds" the seed in a cell on the seed disc until a gentle brush cut-off allows it to fall in a natural trajectory through the seed tube. The design of this system essentially eliminates forward motion of the seed, minimizing roll and bounce in the seed trench. The White payoff . . . greater in-row accuracy with minimal seed coat damage.

New constant-pressure press wheels exert uniform down pressure on the sides of the trench to consistently firm moist soil around the seed despite changing soil or terrain. The White payoff . . . optimum germinating conditions.

A host of standard performance and convenience features are integrated into every 5100 Seed Boss. Features such as a 7x7-inch main frame, hydraulic markers, quick population change transmission and new 1½ bushel seed hoppers. And it's all ready for you in 8-row folding, 6- and 4-row models.

See Your White Dealer for Accuracy that pays off.

FABRIC SOFTENERS ENHANCE WASHABLES

The use of fabric softeners continues to rise as consumers recognize the product's ability to minimize wrinkling, reduce need for ironing and make fabrics feel soft, fluffy and free of static cling Fabric softeners are available as two basic types washer added and dryer added Following manufacturer's instructions for use is important to achieve desired laundering results

Washer added softeners are liquids, with the majority used in the rinse cycle. One type is designed for addition to the wash cycle along with the detergent or soap It can also be used in the rinse cycle Wash added fabric softeners should be added to the wash water before the detergent or soap and clothes. Rinse added types need to be diluted with water before pouring into the machine If the washer is equipped with a fabric softener dispenser, follow directions in the machine's instruction manual for correct use Most manufacturers suggest diluting the softener before pouring it into the dispenser. This prevents clogging. Avoid pouring fabric softener directly onto clothes as this can cause a grease-like stain

Dryer added fabric softeners are available in sheets or packet form In one type, the fabric softener ingredients are disbursed on a nonwoven sheet of rayon or polyester Another uses polyurethane foam sheets for carrying the ingredients The packet form provides fabric softener in a pouch that is attached to a fin of the dryer drum. The heat of the dryer helps to transfer the softener to the clothes as they tumble

Dryer added softeners can cause translucent, often streaky, oily-looking stains, especially noticeable on solid-color permanent press fabrics and synthetics such as polyester or nylon Consumers may be puzzled by the sudden appearance of these stains, which may be the result of fabric softener being concentrated on an area of fabric

Fabric softener stains are not permanent and can be easily removed Dampening the stained area and rubbing it with bar soap, then rewashing the article

IS IT HUNGER OR IT IS APPETITE?

Over 40 million Americans are 10 percent or more overweight. About 20 million are at least 20 percent overweight. Dr Richard St Pierre, associate professor of Health Education at The Pennsylvania State University, feels that one cause may be that people do not know the difference between their hunger and their appetites.

Hunger is the physical craving for food. You have probably experienced the sensation of emptiness and perhaps even cramp-like pains in the stomach which can be satisfied by eating

Your appetite, on the other hand, is the emotional craving for food which is affected by such things as smell, sight of food, or remembering a pleasant taste

Think of the difference Appetite is enjoyable while hunger often produces unpleasant sensations When your hunger is appeased, your appetite can remain One common example is when you still have an appetite for a sweet dessert after your hunger has thoroughly been satisfied with a large meal

Of course, being aware of the difference between hunger and appetite is not going to magically make you lose weight But, being aware that it's your appetite telling you to have that huge piece of chocolate cake and that you are not really hungry may make you think twice before you bite

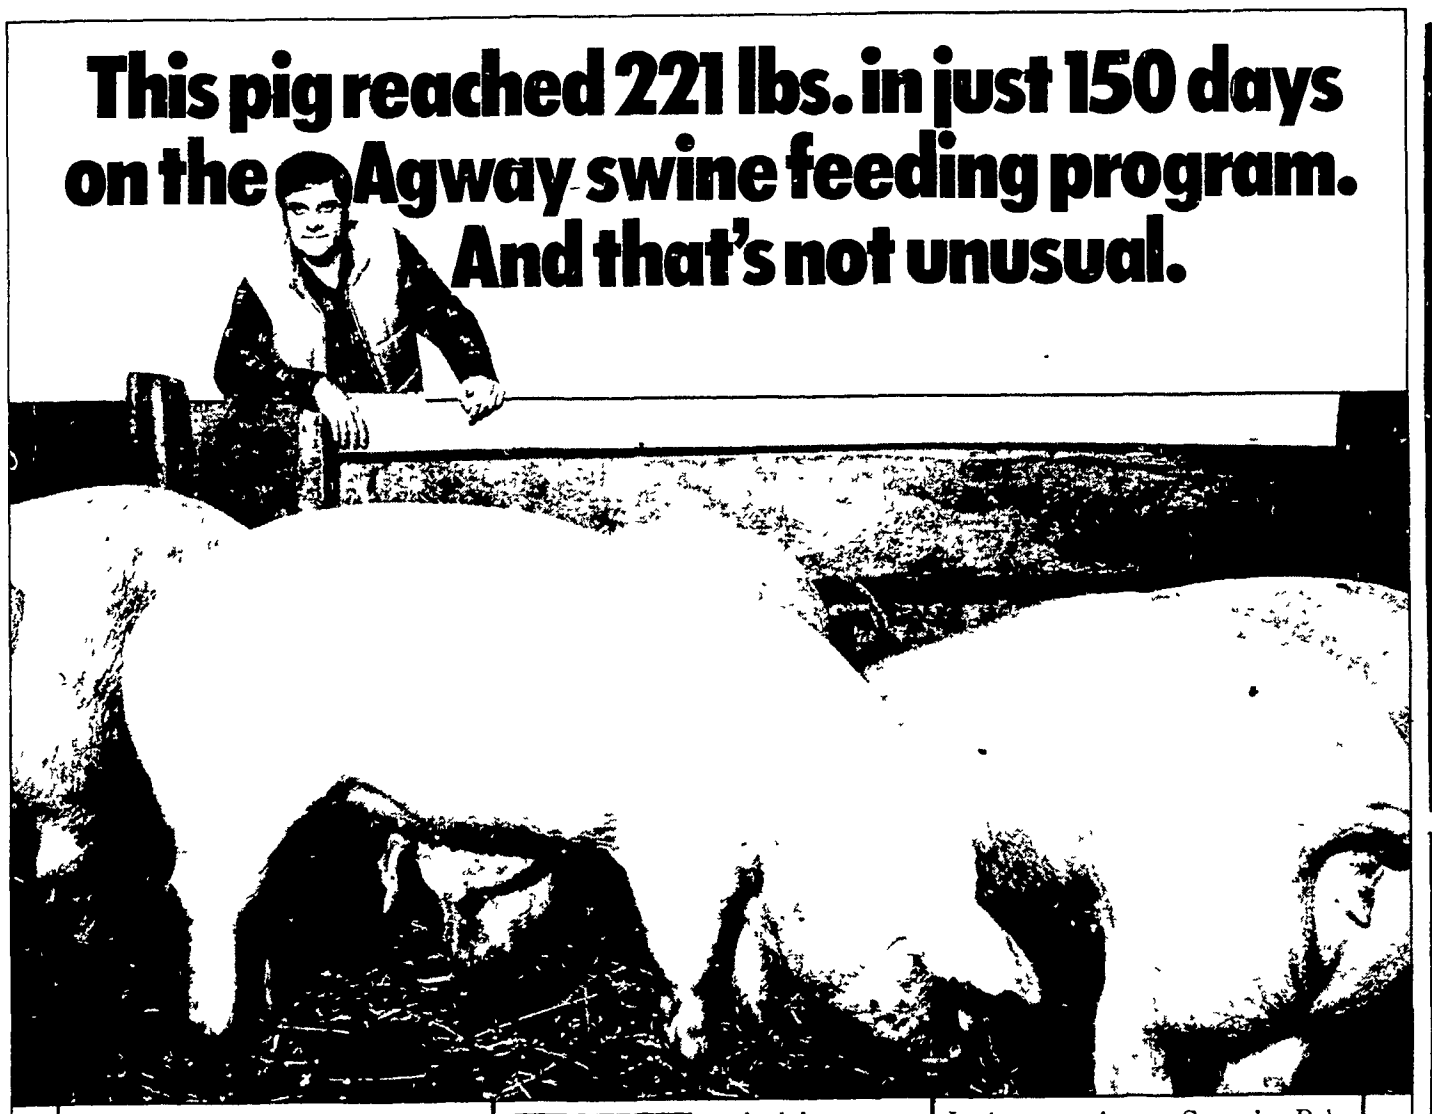
This pig reached 221 lbs. in just 150 days on the Agway swine feeding program. And that's not unusual.



It's no secret that feed is the single biggest cost in producing pork. That's why it pays to make sure your feeding program gets your pigs to market weight in the shortest possible time.

From Agway Squealer Pellets to Agway Pork Finisher, there's a farm-tested Agway feed nutritionally formulated for each stage of a pig's growth. Agway complete swine feeds provide all known nutritional needs, including energy, protein (amino acids), minerals and vitamins.

COMPLETE AGWAY SWINE FEEDS	% Protein	% Fat	% Fiber
Squealer Pellets (MX)	18	4 0	3 0
Pig Starter Pellets (PT MX)	18	3 5	4 5
Hog Feed (T 20)	14	3 5	5 0
Pork Finisher (T 20) 4	12	3 5	5 0
4 of 8 Agway swine feeds available

The farm tested Agway swine feed program can help make each of your pigs an ideal pig

And Agway also supplies a complete line of medicated feeds and supplements

BACKED BY FEED TRIALS ON 1800 PIGS ANNUALLY.

Agway, in conjunction with other cooperatives, runs feed trials on 1800 pigs annually at the Agway Swine Research Farm in Lexington, Ill.

New feed ideas are constantly tested and proven, and the results incorporated into the Agway swine feeding program.

The ideal hog as defined by the American Pork Congress attains a weight of 220 lbs in 150 to 165 days It requires no more than 3 lbs of feed per each pound of gain and delivers a loin 30 inches long with a loin eye of 5 square inches

In the past, Agway Squealer Pellets and Agway Starter Pellets were developed as the direct result of this program.

YOUR AGWAY SWINE EXPERT CAN TELL YOU MORE.

The latest research results and the details on the Agway swine feed program are available from your Agway Enterprise Serviceperson. Contact him through your local Agway.

A growing concept in home design

Decorate with fabric

BY DEBBIE KOONTZ

LANCASTER — "Decorating with fabric is for everyone; renters too, because whatever you make with fabric you can take with you whenever you leave. Even your wallcoverings can go with you," declares Michele Rodgers, home extension economist.

Rodgers directed a recent fabric workshop at the Farm and Home Center exploring the many possibilities of fabric decoration in the home.

The homemakers attending the afternoon and evening sessions were most delighted and pleased to learn that fabric is as easy, economical and smart to add to walls as wallpaper is. And when considering how much time is spent in the home, making it a pleasant place to live seems only practical. An explanation of covering walls with fabric will follow, but first a few suggestions from Rodgers.

"Three things will guide you as you decorate with fabric. They are optimism, desire and imagination," she explained. "When you decorate anything with fabric you must ask yourself these questions; What am I asking of the fabric? Do I want it to pleat, drape hang? How much use and abuse will it need to take? Will it stand abrasion? How will it last from sunlight to sunlight? Will it fade? What kind of cleaning will it take? These will all guide you in fabric selection.

"Another thing to do when buying material is to get it away from other bolts, drop it somewhere and stand back and look at it," she suggested.

The next thing to consider before starting to cover anything would be to analyze what tools are at hand and with which ones you are most comfortable. Consider your surface too; will it be a temporary covering or will you wish to change it soon?

Rodgers demonstrated techniques to use in covering storage boxes, picture frames, and file boxes. For the boxes she suggested covering as if you were wrapping a present and to use starch, staples or glue to hold it in place.

Other areas of a house which fabric can complement are: your table (try making napkins, tablecloths and placemats), your wardrobe (only your imagination can limit the ways to cover coat

This spring wreath can be made easily with pieces of blue, yellow and pink material. This is an example of a decoration made with fabric which looks harder to make then it really is.

Michelle Rodgers shows the proper techniques to use when decorating walls with fabric. Using fabric is not only an inexpensive way to decorate, but also offers an unlimited number of designs to use.

Introducing a guaranteed fixed-rate loan for farmers.

It's the American Bank advantage.

American Bank has been committed to helping farmers since the turn of the century. Because of our close association, we are aware that 1980 was a very bad year for you. So we're making a special limited 4-week offer of a fixed-rate Crop Builder Loan. This loan can be used to finance the growing of field crops for later sale or for use on the farm as feed.

The advantages of our Crop Builder Loan are many. Once your loan has been approved, you'll be assured of getting the money you need, when you need it. And since the rate is fixed, you won't have to worry about the volatility of floating interest rates. This will help you in determining the cost of producing a crop and will reduce your risk in the crop investment.

The Crop Builder Loan is available to all farmers who are eligible. You don't presently have to be an American Bank customer. To take advantage of this offer, contact Gene Richard or Bill Hughes in our Agri-business Department at (215) 375-5993.

Commitment to farmers. It's the American Bank advantage.

Good bankers. Good neighbors.

hangers), your drawers (find a material with a large flower design, cut two out, fill with scented fillers and cross stich together), your windows, and your doors (try to make a draft stopper and a wreath for your door)

When covering walls the secret is starch By using starch, you can cover the wall and later take it down with no trouble and paint the wall if you wish Fabric covered walls are only as permanent as you want them to be explains Rodgers.

"This isn't really a new concept I'm showing you," she said "Cavemen put furs on their walls for insulation and the Europeans decorated with large tapestries."

One advantage to wallpaper is that it does not crack with the settling of your house the way wallpaper does

To cover walls, follow these helpful hints:

First cover floors because starch is very sticky

Use regular store-bought starch, undiluted.

Wipe off your walls before starting to assure cleanliness

Choose a cottony material for walls because it's absorbent

Wipe one section of the wall with starch using a regular sponge Then lay one piece of material on it The material can be as long as you wish

Place the material such that one inch is left at the top between wall and ceiling

Next tack the fabric in place at the ceiling edge with push pins.

Smooth the fabric down with the sponge or your hand.

Wipe starch on top of fabric Be sure to line fabric correctly But if you make a mistake, remember you can just peal the material off using water.

Line up your next piece of fabric and repeat the process.

When relatively dry, cut off the excess one inch of fabric with a single edge razor placed in the razor carrier.

Rodgers suggests, when adding pieces next to each other, to overlap at the most of one inch If you wish to get rid of the overlap, use the razor to cut a straight line down the fabric parallel to the edge and peal away both excess strips

From a hand-out sheet Rodgers presented to each homemaker at the workshop comes the following guidelines on fabric selection and handling

-Fabrics with all-over prints are easiest to apply They tend to keep your eyes moving and conceal imperfections. If the design is small, it may not require matching They also show soiling less quickly than open-ground prints.

-In every patterned fabric a design motif will oe repeated at regular intervals. Check the distance between the repeat, the larger the repeat is, the more fabric is required.

-Preshrink fabric only if it will need to be washed later

SEWING

-Seams are usually 1/2 inch rather than 5/8 inch.

-Selvages are often trimmed up to prevent puckering.

STAPLING

-Basic Technique: center fabric and smooth it in place, hold with push pins Staple at center of one side and work to the ends. Staple opposite side in same manner, then staple two remaining ends

-To camouflage staple - paint or color staples to match fabric background

FUSIBLE WEBS

-Webbing is placed between two objects, heat is applied, webbing melts and two objects are then fused or bonded Webbing bonds as it cools.

GLUE

-Use decorator craft variety, it's tackier and faster drying than other types.

STARCH

-Undiluted starch serves as a glue to apply fabric to many surfaces.

-Always use liquid starch, not spray.

-The color of the starch does not affect fabric

-For more holding power and built-in soil resistant finish, sponge the starch on top of the fabric, thoroughly soaking it.

-Starch that contains salt may cause pitting and rusting of scissors and other metal objects Rinse them off as you work

Avoid wallpaper wheat paste in preference to starch; it can cause staining on some fabrics

On being a farm wife -And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

How I wish there was some funny incident, some light-hearted, amusing anecdote to write about, as I sit here at the typewriter this glorious sunny morning

But I just don't have it

This hasn't been a funny week

Instead, I cringe inside, from the crackling of six shots, the whisking away of a wounded president, the puddling of blood beneath a fallen form on a sidewalk

Again and again, in living color and a deluge of descriptions, this scene and its sounds engulfed our private lives Horror, dismay, disgust has not lessened with the retelling

There was a time when our rural predecessors, farmers like ourselves, remained largely isolated and ignorant of the terror and violence of the world around them. When news came, carried word-of-mouth via slow wagons or horseback transportation, it was already history

Knowing firsthand how news can rapidly become over-blown rumor, the information our ancestors did eventually hear was likely garbled in fact and wrinkled in the retelling

But their blissful ignorance removed much of the everyday stress and tension wrought upon us today by instant communication Maybe that's where that term I despise, dumb farmer ' originated

But the day of the dumb farmer," who knew little of the events of the world, is past, and with it has gone the time when terror was something that happened to others

We face it each day, a gnawing worry at what the dog is barking at at midnight, securing ourselves and our possessions behind padlocked doors, sick to the stomach with the nightly news reports of the latest murder, from Atlanta or wherever, and praying that our children can thread their way through the too-readily-available nightmare of drug and drink

Times like this, it would seem appealing to become the ' dumb farmer," isolated and unaware of the rotting ' ' ' that threatens not only the apples, but the whole structure of the barrel as well

That's unrealistic. And I know it. But I'm becoming increasingly frustrated with this society that seems unable to wrest itself from the threat of complete moral deterioration.

We seem unable to help ourselves.

God help us

Pequea Valley FFA seeks farm homes for pheasants

Incubator in vocational agriculture classroom at Pequea Valley High School is being tested with goose eggs prior to launching project to hatch pheasant eggs Trial program to hatch 48 eggs will begin later this month, followed by stocking of birds about the end of June If successful, project may be expanded next year

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

KINZERS — The sights and sounds of rural Lancaster County are all too quickly disappearing and the Pequea Valley FFA Chapter would like to start doing something about it

As Bruce Wanner, one of the chapter's members, explains

"It used to be that you could get up and hear some pheasants cackling almost every morning

"But now you're lucky if you ever get to hear any "

So Bruce and two other chapter members, Mike McCauley and Mike Kreiser, are heading up an FFA committee to see if the chapter can't help replenish the pheasant population in the Pequea Valley area.

And they'd like to enlist the help of some farmers within the school district, who would be interested in providing "homes" for some pheasants they plan to raise this spring

"We want to find some farmers who are willing to sign a pheasant stocking contract with the chapter," according to Mike Kreiser

In the contract, the cooperating farmers would agree to leave a few rows of corn or a strip or two of alfalfa or grass as cover for the birds

Interested farmers, who have land within the school district and are willing to participate in the pheasant project, can contact the Vocational Agriculture Department at Pequea Valley High School, telephone 768-8211

The best time to contact the voag department is weekdays between 1 and 2 30 p m

"We're going to be conducting a trial program this year," Mike McCauley explained

"If enough farmers are interested and the project moves along well, we may expand it next year "

This year's project will involve 48 pheasant eggs, which the chapter is buying from Case Farm Hatchery at Brodbecks

The eggs are due to arrive at the school on April 26 and be placed in the chapter's new incubator for three weeks

After hatching, the pheasant chicks will be kept for 10 to 12 weeks at the school, including time in a new brooder, followed by a stay in flight pens

It is planned to release and stock the birds on the land of cooperating farmers approximately the end of June or early July

While in the brooder, some ground cover will be provided so that the pheasants will get accustomed to scratching around and also learn how to hide

"You can have a problem with cannabalism among pheasants," Clair Witwer, advisor, explained

"The cover will also help them to learn how to get away from each other "

The stay in the flight pens is to give them time in the weather so that body oils for repelling water can develop in their feathers

Since the pheasant eggs cost 80 cents apiece, the chapter committee has been conducting some trial runs with the incubator and brooder A batch of chicken eggs were hatched and the peeps placed in the brooder

Some goose eggs, donated by someone who had a problem of his geese raiding a neighbor's lettuce, are also being tried in the incubator

The incubator rotates the eggs each hour for proper hatching

When the young birds are released in late June or early July, the committee plans to band them with some Pequea Valley FFA tags

"We want to keep track of the birds in order to help if we expand the project next year," Bruce Wanner said

So, any hunters bagging a banded pheasant in the Pequea Valley area next season are asked to contact the chapter as to the location of the bird

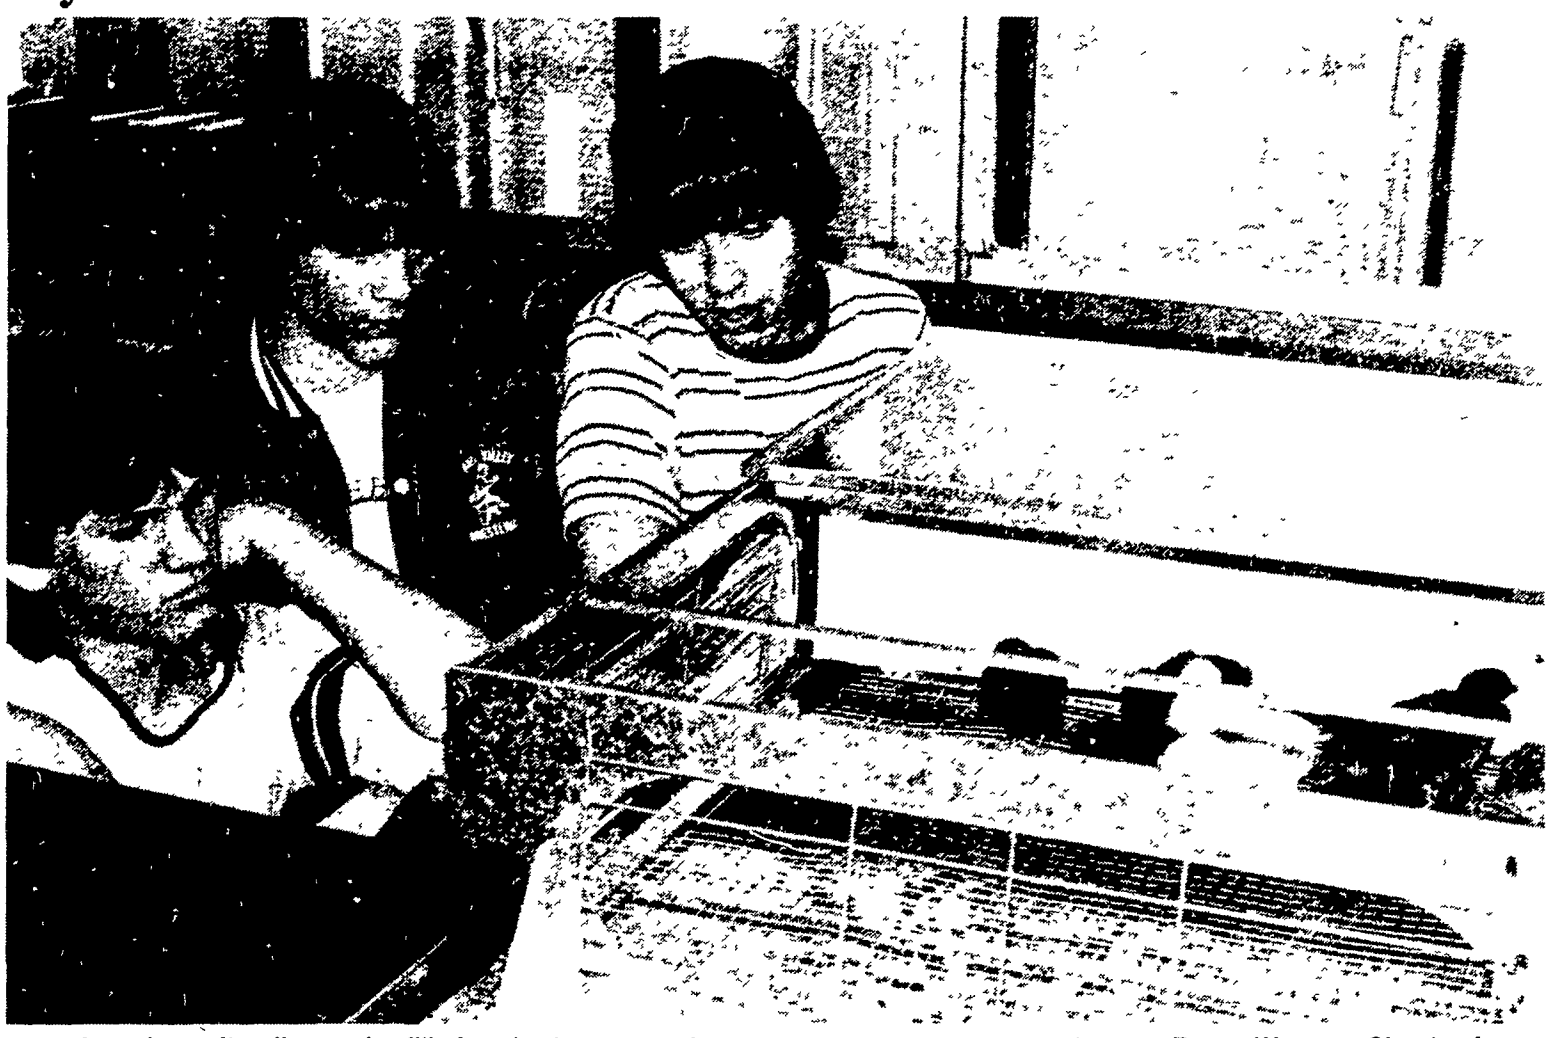
Thus, the chapter's committee is gearing up for the project and seems pretty well prepared, once some cooperating farmers are found

The new incubator and brooder will help assure better success than an impromptu hatching project conducted last year

"A white duck laid some eggs out in front of the school," Bruce Wanner explained

"Because of all the people, she wouldn't sit on them

"So we built a homemade incubator with a light as heat, but just ended up cooking the eggs "



This brooder unit will soon be filled with pheasant chicks which will be raised in project of Pequea Valley FFA Chapter. Members of pheasant committee include, from the left, Mike Kreiser, Mike McCauley and Bruce Wanner. Chapter is now seeking farmers in school district who will cooperate in the pheasant stocking program.

This year, hopefully the project will begin a successful program of pheasant stocking so that Bruce will once again hear the cackle of the hens in the distance as he dips into his regular cooked eggs for breakfast

Chester conservation field days coming April 21, 22

WEST CHESTER — A major soil conservation demonstration will take place April 21 and 22. During these two days, 75 acres at the H E. Myrick Conservation center of the Brandywine Valley Association will be transformed into a model of good soil conservation practices.

Under the guidance of Soil Conservation Services technicians, practices such as contour strips, grassed waterways, diversions, terraces, tile drainage and a farm pond will be installed.

The purpose of the field day is to show the value of good soil conservation practices and the benefit these can provide to individual farmers as well as entire watersheds.

The event is sponsored by the Chester County Conservation District which has sponsored previous field days. The first one, in 1948, also involved in Soil Conservation Services and Brandywine Valley Association.

Many contractors will participate in this demonstration and are donating their time and equipment

For more information on the Soil Conservation Field Day, contact the Chester County conservation District, 215/696-5126, the Soil Conservation Service, 215/696-0398, or Brandywine Valley Association, 215/793-1090

The calf is out of an Excellent dam with a record of over 1000 pounds fat. She was consigned by Marlin Hoff, New Windsor. Md

WHEN IT COMES TO... FIRE ...DON'T PLAY AROUND!

For Dauphin farmer

R-A-I-N spells erosion, not relief

HARRISBURG — The sudden Spring thaw and ensuing rains brought a sigh of relief to many people. However, heavy downpours on partially frozen ground caused a great deal of anxiety for certain Dauphin County residents

Hardest hit by the drought was the farming community, whose lifeblood depends on timely precipitation According to Sand Swank, Soil Conservation Technician for the Soil Conservation Service in Harrisburg, the most serious problems occurred on fields that were bare since last harvest and where winter grains did not germinate due to the drought

Partially thawed ground, little or no soil cover, and heavy rains on droughty topsoil are the causes of our most severe problems, stated Swank

During a follow-up visit to a Dauphin County farm, some of the worst effects of these combined factors were evident, he said Surface water had followed the rows of last year's corn silage crop and, concentrating in a low area had created a series of small gullies

Calculations for soil loss revealed an astonishing 27 tons of topsoil per acre being washed away each year — 10 inches of the plow layer would be lost in the next 20 years

It was a formidable problem, admitted Swank, but the landowner was anxious to prevent it from getting worse

Sudden thaw and heavy rains under drought conditions create headaches for Dauphin County farmers as seen in this devastated cornfield.

By combining minimum-till and no-till management practices with even-width contour strips of alternating crops, the annual soil loss was reduced by 96 percent to 1.2 tons per acre

Swank added although it will be difficult to measure the saving of topsoil in dollars and cents, the benefits derived will soon become apparent The contoured rows will hold water and allow it to soak in rather than run off the field Productivity will increase as soil nutrients are held in the plow layer

Strock warns dairymen: cull or be culled

COCKEYSVILLE, Md. — R.L. Strock, business manager of Maryland Cooperative Milk Producers, in his report to the cooperative members at the organization's annual meeting last Saturday cautioned members that a continuation of present trends of increasing milk production and declining sale of milk and milk products can lead only to market demoralization, market instability and lower returns to dairymen

Strock pointed out that the increased milk production stems from the favorable returns currently enjoyed by dairy farmers at a time when beef, poultry and pork producers are experiencing severe financial hardship, the grain embargo that put a damper on feed grain prices and encouraged dairy farmers to feed larger quantities of feed which further enhanced milk production and relatively low prices from the sale of lower producing cows which caused dairymen to reduce the herd culling rate.

He recommended members begin at once to step up the rate of culling by removing the least profitable cows from the milking herd.

Strock remarked that either dairymen go on an expounding culling program now or face the prospect of themselves being culled from the ranks of dairy farmers by the forces of the marketplace.

The business manager also cited the expanded use of labor saving equipment and genetic improvements in dairy animals which together increased the output per man hour at an annual rate of 10 to 12 percent over the past five years.

Strock called attention to the unusually large quantities of dairy products in excess of domestic market needs which were purchased by the United States Department of Agriculture Commodity Credit Corporation at a cost of $1.3 billion.

He indicated that unless present trends are slowed or reversed the Commodity Credit Corporation purchased in the marketing year ending September 30, 1981 may exceed $2 billion.

The business manager told members that in view of market trends and projected outlays by the Commodity Credit Corporation, the organization is recommending that dairymen forgo the scheduled April 1 increase in milk prices and set about the task of bringing production and sales into a more favorable balance

In reporting on the cooperative's milk hauling and equipment and service divisions Strock cited the very favorable profit from its milk hauling division but said that profits in the equipment sales and service division was down substantially from a year ago; apparently due to high interest costs associated with financing new dairy equipment installations and uncertainty as to the longer term returns for dairy farmers.

The business manager reviewed the organization's participation in a milk processing plant at Mount Holly Springs. The plant, which produces dry milk products and butter, is jointly owned by Maryland Cooperative and Inter-State Milk Producers' Cooperative.

He stated that, while the plant experienced some technical problems in attaining design capacity of almost two million pounds of milk daily, modifications of equipment have been or are currently in progress to provide greater plant operating dependability, reduced operating costs and greater product quality assurance.

Bill designed to clarify farm inheritance tax law

WASHINGTON, D C — In legislation introduced in the House of Representatives last week Iowa Congressman Berkley Bedell charged the Internal Revenue Service with choosing to ignore the intent of Congress when interpreting the special use valuation of estate tax law

Bedell's legislation would clarify the special use provision for estate taxes by requiring that estates which otherwise qualify for special use valuation receive an estate tax reduction regardless of whether the deceased had rented the farm to an heir on a cash or crop (cost-share) basis

In the Tax Reform Act of 1976, Congress provided a special use valuation of family farms and businesses at productive value rather than fair market value, if the farm or business is inherited by a relative of the deceased and maintained as an active family operation by the heir

To qualify for the special use valuation, the decedent or a member of the family must have been a material participant in the operation of the farm or business for the previous five to eight years.

The IRS interpreted this to mean that a farm or business could not qualify for special use valuation if the decedent had cash rented the business/farm to the heirs as opposed to entering into a crop share (cost-share) agreement with the heirs

According to Bedell, this was not the intent of Congress

The IRS failed to notice, or chose to ignore, not only the language of the law, but also a Joint Taxation Committee explanation which stated specifically that Where a related party leases the property and conducts farming or other business activities on the property, the real property may qualify for special use valuation,' "

explained Bedell

This interpretation is extremely unfair to our farmers, not the intent of the Congress, and after fighting with the IRS on this matter, it appears to me that the only way to correct this wrong is to force the IRS to rule in a sensible manner," said Bedell

The latest bill supplements several other estate tax initiatives by the Iowa Congressman, including cosponsoring legislation to reformulate current estate tax law by exempting all estates under $500,000 in value from paying any estate tax He is also involved in legislation to double the present limit on the amount of a gift that can be given tax free from $3,000 to $6,000

New seed varieties available from Penn State

ROCK SPRINGS — Three new varieties of plants developed at Penn State University are available for planting this spring

The three are Penntresh ADX sweet corn, Pa 6203 hybrid field corn, and Tioga deertongue grass They are among the 208 varieties developed and released by the Agricultural Experiment Station at Penn State since 1911.

Pennfresh ADX sweet corn is noted for excellent eating quality because it retains the sugar content of kernels far better than over varieties. It is considered excellent for processing and fresh market High yielding, the ears are 8 to 10 inches long Plants are about six feet tall.

Penntresh ADX sweet corn was developed by Douglas Garwood and Roy Creech of the Department of Horticulture. It was treated widely before it was released in 1977

As with all new varieties developed at Penn State, seed is available from commercial companies and no seed can be obtained at the university

Pa 6203 field corn is a long-season hybrid with both excellent yield and straw strength Plant height is about 86 to 96 inches with ears about 43 inches above the ground

Pa 6203 field corn was developed by Melvin Johnson of the Department of Agronomy.

Tioga deertongue grass was released as a conservation cover crop, not as a forage, says Guy McKee of the Department of Agronomy and one of the developers of this variety.

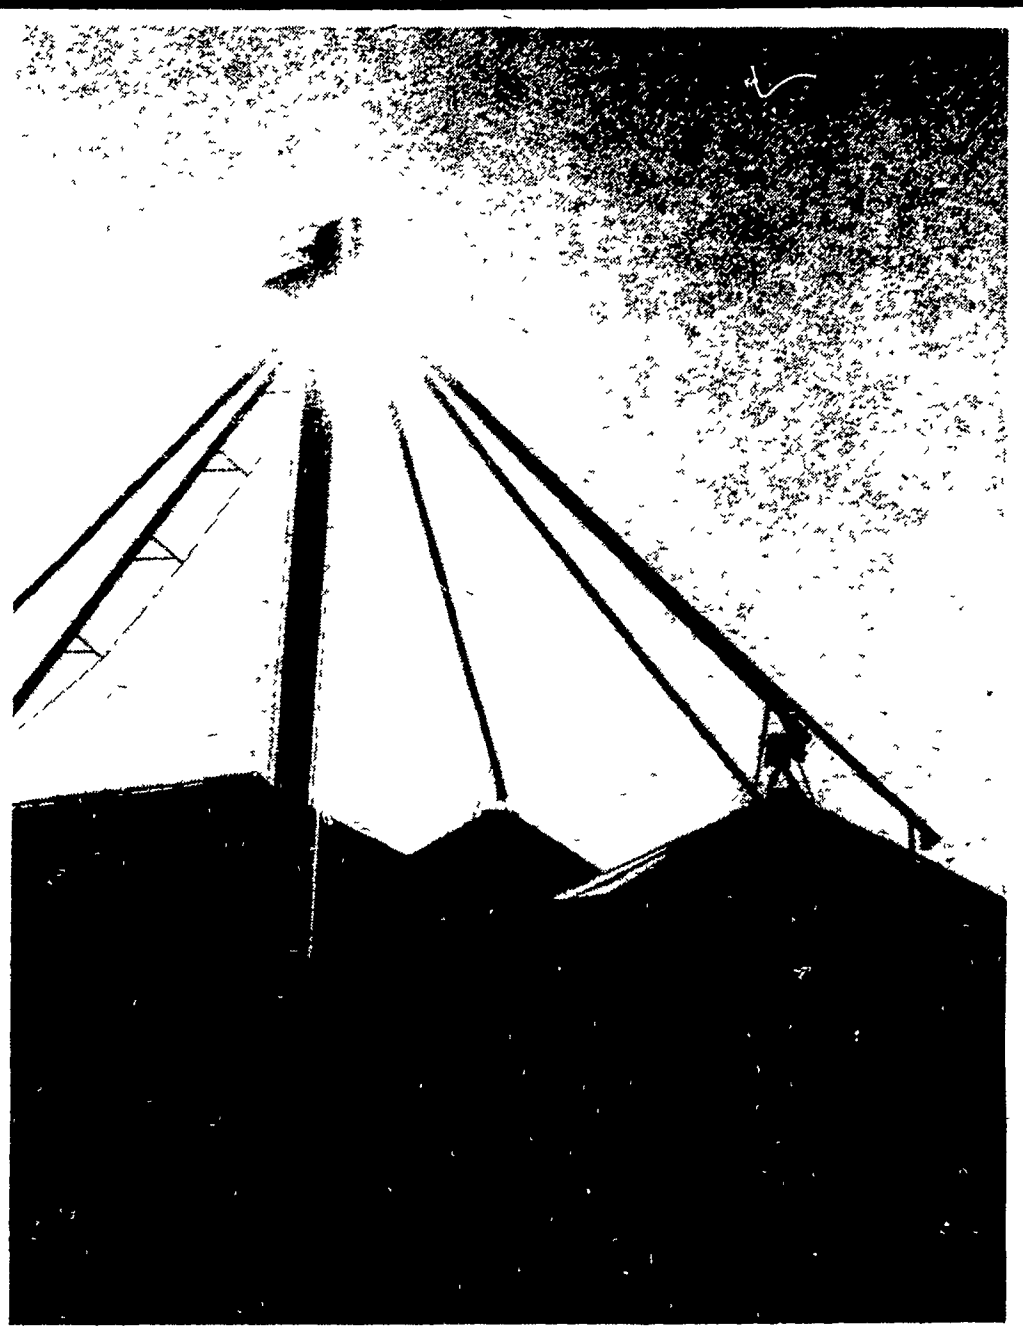
It is suitable for planting on acid mine spoils, gravel pits, and highway slopes. It tolerates acid soils and relatively high concentrations of aluminum and manganese which limit growth of other species.

Tioga deertongue grass provides feed and cover for wildlife such as turkeys, other game birds, song birds, and deer It tolerates both moist and dry sites and can be hydroseeded, McKee pointed out. It is not compatible with cool season grasses and weeds, and should be used on sites lacking other plant growth.

McKee recommends using Tioga deertongue grass in a mixture of one pound of weeping lovegrass, six pounds of birdsfoot trefoil, and 15 pounds of the deertongue grass. The weeping lovegrass provides quick cover. The birdsfoot trefoil fixes atmospheric nitrogen

Deertongue grass germinates somewhat slowly, it was pointed out, so plant as early in the spring as possible and not after the end of June

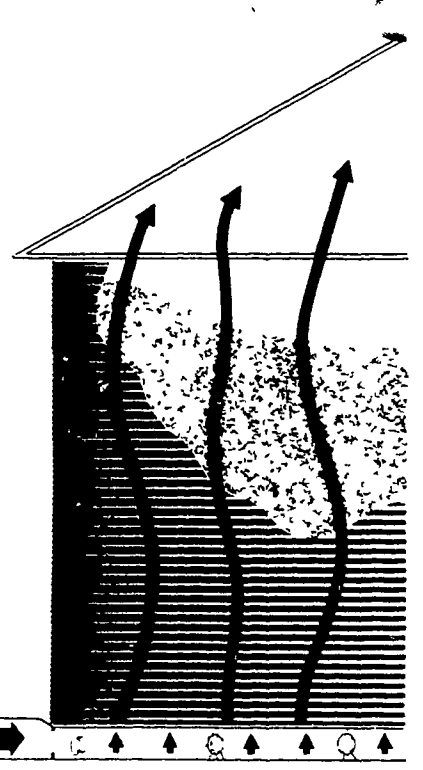
This new conservation cover crop was released jointly by Penn State, Cornell University, and the Soil Conservation Service of the U S Department of Agriculture Its developers, in addition to McKee, were Sidney Dronen and Curtis Sharp of the Soil Conservation Service



TAKE THE HOT AIR OUT OF YOUR GRAIN DRYING PROCESS WITH THIS NEW SCIENCE-ENGINEERED NATURAL-DRY SYSTEM

Now days, you can't afford to heat dry grain from the field. It cost's to much. If you do it yourself or if you have your feed miller do it for you. In addition, research shows high temperature heat drying can burn out valuable nutrients from the grain. Reduce feed quality. Lower production.

That's why more and more farmers have turned to the Harvestall Chillcuring System from Advanced Ag Systems. These drying systems use mother nature's moving-air method to dry the grain in the bin. You simply use our computer test figures to determine the amount of air you must force up through the grain.



It's all computerized and farm tested so you can safely store your grain on the farm at harvest time. Then feed your own grain to livestock. Or sell at a more favorable price. No need to buy expensive fuel. No need to wait in line at the grain elevator. No need to sell grain at low harvest time prices.

To take the hot air out of your grain drying process. Install this science-engineered natural-dry system. For a computer print-out that shows how much air you must move through your size grain bin write to: Advanced Ag Systems, RD 2, Box 174, Elverson, PA 19520. Or Call (215) 886-9118

Livestock producers need embargo, economist says

LANCASTER — Tune in the network news or pick up the newspaper this evening Do you see any stories about the Soviet grain embargo and its effect on American farmer? Does the news imply that the embargo is harming the American agricultural community? Regardless of what your favorite anchorman says, at least some U S farmers — the livestock producers — are hoping the embargo continues in the months to come

According to H Louis Moore, Penn State extension agricultural economist, a further surge in feed grain prices, caused by the lifting of the Soviet grain embargo, would force many producers out of the livestock business

"The users of grain — especially beef, hog and poultry producers — has substantial financial losses in 1980 These losses continue in 1981 as a combination of low livestock and egg prices, high feed costs and high interest rates work great hardship on the livestock economy," says Moore.

He notes that much political and economic discussion focuses on the status of the grain embargo

"In his election campaign, Reagan promised to lift the Soviet grain embargo imposed by the Carter Administration in January 1980 Then - candidate Reagan reasoned that the embargo was ineffective in keeping grain from reaching the Soviet Union, and actually hurt U S farmers

"Now in office, Reagan believes lifting the embargo would send the wrong signals to the USSR It is still implied, however, that the agricultural community is disappointed that the embargo has not been lifted"

Moore believes that the views of grain producers are mistaken as those of all agriculturalists Furthermore, grain producers were not as hard hit by the embargo as publicized

"In the early weeks following the embargo, grain prices received by U S farmers fell sharply But as the Soviets bought heavily from other countries like Argentina, the countries which normally bought from Argentina came to the U S for their needs"

Also, corn exports will set a new marketing record this year and corn prices are currently about 30 percent above a year ago

"While grain producers would gain from the lifting of the embargo, nearly all of the remainder of the economy would suffer," concludes Moore

"A sharp cutback in livestock production will cause substantially higher meat prices and further fuel the increase in 1981 food prices, currently projected to rise by 12 to 15 percent We do not have the extra grain at this time to take on an obligation to ship heavily to the Soviet Union, without causing significant inflationary pressures in domestic food prices"

Senior FFA public speaking winners in Lancaster County are, from the left, Carolyn Witmer, third, Eastern Lancaster County; Mervin Keagy, second, Penn Manor; and Doug Hershberger, first, Solanco

PUT MORE PROFIT IN YOUR ALFALFA.

Whether you grow for a cash crop or to feed your own livestock, you can't afford weeds in your alfalfa. They shorten stand life, lower protein content, lower TDN and reduce overall digestibility and palatability of your hay. In short, excessive weed growth just plain picks your pocket.

ORTHO PARAQUAT CL herbicide burns back weeds on contact. Apply PARAQUAT during the winter to dormant established stands. It's exceptionally broad spectrum and destroys weeds with extraordinary speed. Apply PARAQUAT with ORTHO X-77 Spreader.

DANGER: PARAQUAT is highly toxic if swallowed and should be kept out of the reach of children. To prevent accidental ingestion, never transfer to food, drink or other containers. Read the label carefuly and follow all directions, danger statements and worker safety rules.

Restricted Use Pesticide. Use all chemicals only as directed.

HUMMELSTOWN — Members of the Lower Dauphin Chapter of the Future Farmers of America took a bit of the farm to students of the Conewago Elementary School in Conewago Township on Monday

The chapter's Community Service Committee took a number of farm animals to the school as part of a Food for America Project.

This project is conducted yearly to acquaint elementary students with farm animals and the role that they play in agricultural food production.

The FFA students, who took rabbits, pigs, calves, lambs and chickens to the school, included Bill Capp, Deb Fleck and Todd James, seniors; Bernice Finkey and Zantha Weaver, juniors; and Duane Herr, sophomore.

The FFA students talked to the students about each of the animals. In addition, the elementary students were permitted to hold and pet the animals and ask questions about each.

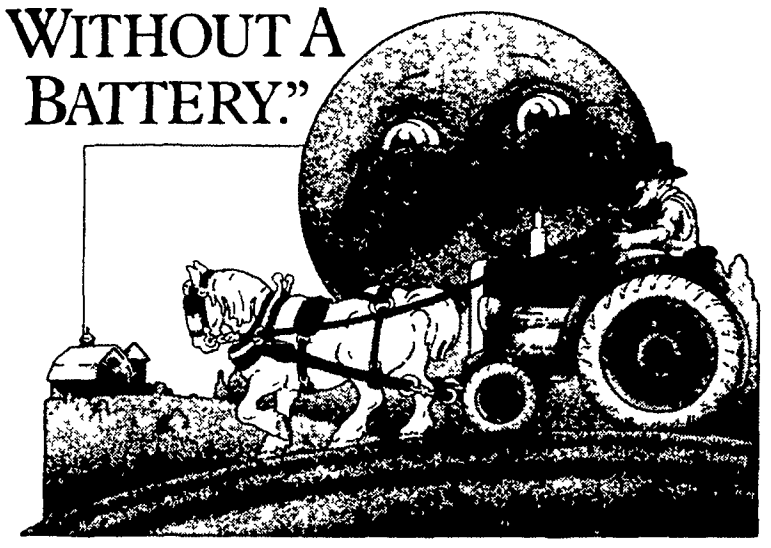
"PLANTING WITHOUT K-MAG IS A LOT LIKE STARTING A TRACTOR WITHOUT A BATTERY."



It's almost impossible to make a tractor work without a battery Well, you can't expect much better results when a farmer plants crops without adding enough magnesium and sulphur to the soil It's difficult for them to get started

K-Mag® not only starts crops right, but helps keep them going at their maximum All season long It contains 18% magnesia and 22% sulphur, plus 22% potash So, when it's mixed with ordinary fertilizers, K-Mag puts back the vital nutrients most of those high-analysis plant foods don't It becomes [illegible]

strengthens soil for growing grain, forage, cotton, tobacco, peanuts, soybeans, fruit, vegetables—whatever a farmer may be planting right now

For that farmer, the addition of K-Mag pays off in a more profitable yield For the dealer, it's a happier customer This means repeat sales Because K-Mag works the first time and every time it's used Duval has plenty of details on how K-Mag can help put that important spark of growing life back into soil

Farm Business News

Resumes production

CHARLES CITY, Iowa — White Farm Equipment, Company announced here last week the resumption of production of its full line of farm wheel tractors White Farm Equipment manufactures and distributes tractors ranging from 30 to 210 horsepower from Charles City

The first tractor off the assembly line was a White 'Field Boss" tractor Model 2-70 It was greeted by members of White Farm management and Charles City staff in an informal celebration, which signaled the return to full production of the plant after nearly 11 months of curtailed operations due to a depressed farm economy and high interest rates

White Farm noted its South Bend, Indiana, factory resumed production and shipment of farm implements and tillage tools more than two months ago.

"Today's farm machinery market is improved over one year ago, and according to projections it will continue to improve," Fuller said. "It is not as strong now as it has been in the past several years, but, as demand rises, our production schedule will be adjusted upward to adequately supply our dealers

"During the curtailment, the company virtually reconstructed its organization so that the needs and the pace of the market can be responded to more rapidly. White Farm emerges from this period restructured and streamlined in many ways - from management techniques to physical operations. Our goals are improved efficiency and better planning for the demands of the retail market."

Employment levels will continued to follow historical trends to some extent. However, a part of the company's new strategy is to more efficiently manage around the cyclical layoff patterns which have been common throughout the farm machinery industry for years.

White Farm officials said financial operations of the company are on a strong footing. Both wholesale and retail financing are in place through an agreement with Borg-Warner Acceptance Corporation. In addition, a strong bank line of operating capital has been established, Fuller said

The company will maintain its dealer network and has begun to offer aggressive retail sales incentive programs to capture an increasingly larger share of the farm equipment market.

Fuller said "We are being extremely well supported by our traditional, long standing suppliers in bringing the operations back to full production."

CONRAD, IA — Ideal Livestock Equipment has introduced a new heated nipple waterer for hogs.

With the Ideal nipple waterer, water wastage is minimal The nipple allows the correct amount and pressure of water to flow so that the pig doesn't get too much or too little water

The standard heated nipple waterer comes with four nipples The nipples are placed 20 inches high to accommodate young and older pigs alike Each unit can handle up to 120 growing pigs

With the nipple waterer, there is no trough to clean out. Hogs will drink more water if it is fresh and clean, helping increase weight gains The nipple waterer never needs cleaning and always provides clean water

In cold weather conditions, the nipple waterer is heated at very low cost. The unit has an in-line heater behind the nipple, and a supply line heater too

Ford tractor sales look for recovery in 1981

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich — Ford Motor Company sees a steady improvement in worldwide tractor sales over the next two years, M H Manning, Ford vice president and general manager of Ford Tractor Operations, said here last week

"Ford tractor dealers maintained their market share during an off-year for the industry- last year," Manning told a Grand Rapids Chamber of Commerce audience "We're looking for a modest recovery in sales in North America and around the world in 1981, and 1982 will be even better

"The upswing comes at an ideal time for Ford and its dealers We just introduced an improved lineup of four-cylinder diesel engines and we're taking aggressive steps to further strengthen our market position in the 1980's

"Ford tractors have a reputation for quality and durability," he said, "and we are spending a considerable amount of time and effort to improve our product image even further Over the past five years, for example, our studies have shown a 15 percent drop in Ford tractor repair rates and we'll achieve additional improvements this year

"We're not standing our past reputation Ford Tractor Operations plans to be a leading worldwide manufacturer of agricultural and industrial tractors for years to come. We invested a record amount in produce development last year and we're going to break that record in 1981 "

Ford Motor Company will produce its five-millionth tractor later this year and has been in the tractor business since 1917 — almost as long as it has been in the car-and-truck business

Plans equipment auction

CHESTER SPRINGS — After 35 years of serving the agricultural community of Chester, Montgomery and Lancaster Counties, Nevin Myer & Sons, Inc , of Chester Springs, will be going out of business

A complete liquidation auction is planned for April 18

Nevin started in business selling New Holland machinery, which he has sold up to the present time Later he also sold Case and Gehl equipment

Over the years, there has been a change in his community from farming to urbanization, so that the market in the immediate area has decreased Also, there is a tendency to larger dealerships, requiring a greater capitalization

Nevin and his son said they thought there were better ventures elsewhere with less risk capital involved

Nevin Myer and his son enjoyed a reputation for their honesty and integrity in their business, over the years

The sale will be conducted by Hess & Moyer, Auctioneers, of Collegeville

Dump treated cow's milk

SHAKOPEE, MN — The dump belt is a marker designed to help prevent the accidental marketing of milk from cows that have been treated with antibiotics

The bright red plastic marker has a hook that fits snugly around the cow's rear leg above the hock It is secured firmly with a red web belt The back side of the marker is molded to fit comfortably against the cow's leg

The word ' dump" is written on the red marker in black as a reminder to discard the milk of the treated cow Inverted, the dump belt still reads correctly The marker can be used on either side of the cow

The marker makes it inconvenient to milk the cow when it's placed on the milking side of the cow This is a further reminder to dump the milk

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

DENVER — When Roy Weaver, R2 Denver, received the diversified livestock proficiency award at last week s annual banquet of the Cloister FFA, it couldn't have gone to a more appropriate winner.

Just an 11th grader in the vocational agriculture program at Ephrata High School, Roy has raised more different types of livestock during the past year than most Lancaster County farmers many times his senior

His flock of Suffolk crosses was quite prolific this spring, providing a crop of some 24 lambs

Then, there were the veal calves he raised and since sold off.

He had a capon project, too.

He's raising a polled Hereford steer and also won the chapter's chain steer this year.

Although that s a pretty varied livestock operation right there, it's the couple of other critters that occupy a large stall in the barn that brings his diversified tag to its peak of meaning

For now, the youthful son of Mr. and Mrs Clarence Weaver is also raising buffalo

That's right, honest-to-goodness real live buffalo, the kind you see in the old Westerns on TV and occasionally in a game preserve

'Everyone asks why raise buffalo, ' Weaver commented

Why not I ve been interested in them for a long time

' One of my uncles had one and I thought it would be interesting to raise them "

Thus far, Weaver has two buffalo, soon to become three There s a five-year-old cow and her last year's calf She s due to calve again late this month

He bought the calf, which will be a year old in May, late in November from Bob Rohrer, near Quarryville Rohrer had a bull, cow and this her first calf.

The bull died the end of January and Rohrer asked Weaver if he was interested in the cow So, he ended up rejoining the cow and offspring

After she calves again, I ll likely get her bred again and then start looking to get a bull of my own," Weaver said.

Then, I'll sell off calves as breeding stock to others who are interested in raising them "

Thus far, feeding and care has been quite similar to his steers. But with one particular difference

'You just don t mess around with them the way you might get familiar with a steer, Weaver said.

Weaver shows a lot of respect for the cow, which already tips the scales at a half-ton or so and still has three or four years to grow.

But he also learned early to keep an eye on the calf, too

"When the calf first arrived, before I got the cow, I went in with her and started petting just like I would a young steer.

"She came at me. I don t know if she would have hit me or not because I didn't hang around to find out "

Also, in the stall with the mother and calf is his polled Hereford steer

Actually, the steer and buffalo get along better than the two buffalo, ' he explained

Weaver plans to work on them a bit to try and find out what specialty food they like

The bull was real fond of apples," he said

This way you can get a better handle on them and have something to use as bait when handling them

The buffalo will be going on pasture and Weaver plans to leave them out after that

They actually don t need anything, but a three-sided shed will help cut some of the draft during the winter," he said.

So, if you re driving through the Lancaster County hinterlands in the area between Denver and Reinholds, don t be surprised if you see a few buffalo ambling through a pasture.

It s an area where now the buffalo will roam as part of one of the most diversified livestock operations of any FFA member around these parts

Roy Weaver, member of the Cloister FFA Chapter, looks over stall containing just part of his diversified livestock operation. The five-year-old buffalo cow is due to calve late this month. Weaver also has the cow's first calf, which will be a year old in May, and plans to add a bull to the growing herd in the future.

Bursting With Production

Recently, I was asked why dairy cattle in California tend to outproduce our herds, here in the East - and they do it in much larger sized herds

This is a good question, and I think we can learn a few lessons from our Western friends

I have never been to California, so that makes me an "expert". Nevertheless, I do have a few thoughts I'd like to share with you.

I have heard that California dairymen are blessed with high quality forages They insist on top quality, are willing to pay for quality, and they get it I understand they buy forages on the basis of its nutrient content Oh, what a lesson we can learn from this!

Being "nuts" about quality, they probably demand uniformity of quality, too, this means having large supplies of forages of similar kind and quality to feed over extended periods of time This puts them in a good position to fine tune their feeding programs with some degree of assurance that the ration will be balanced - today, tomorrow and several weeks from now - a situation which favors good herd health, good production and good reproduction

We can never lose sight of the fact that cows are ruminants, and they require forages for top performance - the better the quality, the better the production

Why are they able to get high quality forages on the West Coast?

One of the reasons is much of their alfalfa is shipped in from areas where the climate can be controlled by irrigation and where the weather is always "fit" for harvesting and curing hay

Wouldn't it be nice to be able to turn the outside temperature up and down, and to turn the rain and sunshine on and off to fit your growing and harvesting schedules!?

Another thing many California dairymen have going for them is, they are full time cow men They are big enough to specialize, and to attract well-trained people to serve them Their cows probably get the attention they need, and the cow man is less apt to be distracted by field work and other farm concerns

Plan Winter Feed Now

Many cows soon will be turned out to pasture This is a good time to observe your herd's performance closely

If production goes up, and cows conceive better, I would be concerned. This could indicate that your winter feeding program was not up to par If this is the case, it could have "cost you dearly" in the form of lost production, low fat tests and poorer conception.

If this were my herd, I'd be happier if I saw production drop when cows went out to pasture. At least I'd have the satisfaction of knowing I did a pretty good job feeding the herd over the winter and putting up good quality forage last year.

If production did drop when cows went out to pasture, I would also want to restrict pasture consumption in order to increase dry matter intake by feeding more hay, low-moisture silage, or hay

So, now is a good time to be analyzing what went wrong and what went right

Did you have the quality and quantity of forages you needed for good production, plus the quantity and uniformity necessary for developing a balanced ration and a good, economical feeding program?

Could you have benefited from feeding more forages, or from having more hay crop forages in the dairy ration?

Having answered these questions and determined your forage needs, your next challenge is to grow, harvest, purchase, store and feed out your forages in accordance with these needs Easier said than done but, here are a few possibilities for consideration

Concentrate on planting those forage crops which you need the most, the ones which are most expensive to buy or will save you the most in purchased feed costs, and the ones for which quality is most difficult to control

Perhaps it is alfalfa If you grow your own, you are in a good position to control and anticipate its quality, whether it be good or bad

However, you may not have the time nor the equipment necessary to plant and harvest crops in a manner conducive to top quality or you may have insufficient acreage

In this case, there are several other options hire someone to grow and harvest forages for you, or make purchase arrangements for forages well in advance of need - and before prices skyrocket.

In other words, attempt to control the quality and quantity of your forage, and the market, to your advantage

Stage of maturity and moisture at time of harvesting are two factors which greatly affect quality Come harvest time, it seems like the weather never cooperatives and there is always more work to be done than time permits.

Here are a few suggestions for relieving the strain, reducing the risks and improving forage quality

Select alfalfa varieties and hay crops of different maturities If mixed stands are planted, make sure the species have compatible maturities The use of hay preservatives or ensiling a crop as haylage lets you harvest at optimum maturities for top quality and gives you a jump on the weather

To keep all the corn from becoming ready" on the same day, stagger the planting dates, or plant hybrids of different maturities This will also stagger pollination times, thus reducing the risk of reduced yields due to poor pollination

Variety - Not the Spice of Life

For dairy cows, variety may not always be the spice of life It is difficult for cows to sustain production when the have to adjust to frequent changes in the ration, production and herd health can suffer.

This can occur when cows are fed timothy hay this week, switched to clover or a different batch of timothy next week, then to haylage the following week The quality and consistency of these forages can vary considerably, and it becomes almost impossible to keep the ration balanced

Thus, there are advantages to growing fewer different crops and growing more acres of them, while also concentrating on top quality and high yields

For example, maybe alfalfa and corn, plus a few acres of grass, ought to be your only crops They complement each other well in the feeding program. They are high quality, nutritious production and milk yield per acre.

However, every farm situation is different You may need some small grains to provide you with straw, or some sudex to stretch your pastures out through the summer, etc

If you re short on hay, you may be forced to take a cutting off of an old sod field before planting it to a late crop of corn Generally, these practices and crops are not as productive as a corn-alfalfa rotation. They may bail you out of an immediate emergency only to leave you in a similar predicament a year from now because you are not as productive However, before making any changes, consider all costs and analyze your situation very carefully, every farm has its own unique situations

Prepare for droughts

Summer droughts can alter the best of plans Droughts are hard to predict, but in our area, we are already entering Spring with low levels of soil moisture.

To help combat the stunning effects of a dry summer, you can encourage crops to develop deep, extensive root systems, and preserve soil moisture

Deep rooting is fostered by good fertility, good drainage, good soil tilth, and by early planting The incorporation of lime, fertilizer and manure at recommended rates will help

Plant crops as early as practical to give them maximum opportunity to become well established and deep rooted before summer droughts set in

Here is where double cropping can work against you, the first crop consumes scarce moisture and the second crop may never get established nor do well, you may do better planting a full season crop early

Plant deep rooted crops such as alfalfa, they'll survive dry spells better than shallow rooted crops such as grasses The proper use of starter fertilizers encourages rapid root development, and the use of soil insecticides can help prevent roots from insect injury

Few better water absorption and for less runoff, avoid soil compaction, and practice strip cropping and contour farming whenever possible Perform the minimum amount of tillage One of the best conservation practices is no-till seeding into a mulch cover

Pseudorabies increasing, but at slower rate

LANCASTER — The incidence of pseudorabies in swine has increased substantially since 1974, but at a slower rate over the past three years, according to a recently completed U S Department of Agriculture survey

Testing of swine blood samples over a six-week period showed an 8.39-percent level of pseudorabies, compared with 3 73 percent found after a similar survey in 1977-78 and 0.56 percent in a 1974 survey

Jim Downard, a veterinarian with the Department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, points out, however, that the findings must be viewed with caution because the surveys may be biased by seasonal differences, increased use of vaccine and other factors

"Tests cannot differentiate between vaccinated animals and those that are infected," he notes "No vaccines were available in 1974 And although USDA-licensed vaccines were being used during both of the latter surveys, they were used much more extensively during the past year or so."

Downard credits the slowing down of the rate of increase over the past three years to greater producer awareness of the disease and to enactment of state and federal movement regulations, along with the use of state quarantines on infected herds

On May 17, 1979, federal regulations went into effect requiring that breeding stock be tested and found negative On July 1, 1980, feeder pigs either had to be tested and found negative or originate in a state that has authority to quarantine herds where the disease is diagnosed or suspected

Pseudorabies-also call Aujesky's disease, mad itch in cattle and infections bulbar paralysis–is a virus disease that primarily affects swine Death losses are highest among young pigs It is often fatal when it spreads to cattle, sheep, wildlife and dogs The disease does not affect humans

The survey results will be used as an aid in estimating what the disease costs the swine industry This information is vital to guide producers and state-federal animal health officials in formulating programs for the control and eradication of pseudorabies

Data obtained from the current survey plus information on the costs to producers from pseudorabies was presented to the Pseudorabies Ad Hoc Advisory Committee on March 10 prior to the American Pork Congress in Kansas City, Mo., Downard said.

U S corn plantings are expected to total 84 0 million acres, fractionally less than last year

Soybean acreage of 69 8 million, will be down less than one percent

All hay for harvest, at 61 1 million acres will be up three percent

Tobacco acres will total 938,970, also up three percent Acreage of oats will total 13 5 million, one percent more than last year

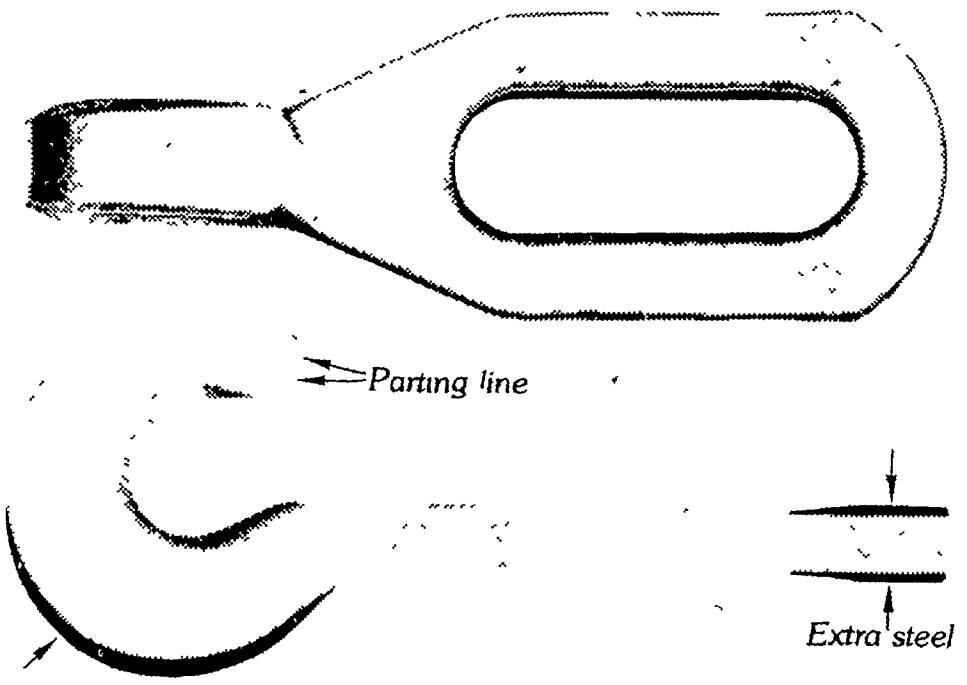
barn cleaner
by JAMESWAY



All-forged link

The new Jamesway Hook-Link barn cleaner features links that are totally forged (not stamped out). Links are reinforced at the wear points with extra steel to a thickness of 5/8". Forging changes the grain of the steel, causing it to curve around the contours of the link in unbroken flow lines, for extra strength. Closely controlled heat-treating provides in-depth hardening for maximum wear and strength.

It's worth more than you realize . . . costs less than you think.

fiberdome SILO CHUTE made with fiberglass, the material of the future
— and proven in the past —

The Fiberdome chute is designed and engineered to be installed on most types of silos. Its structure allows it to withstand the toughest beating the weather elements or silo unloading systems can possibly dish out.

The chute is constructed in full 7 ½' sections to minimize the number of joints. Connecting joints have a 2 ½" tongue and groove design to keep feed in and water out. The large ribbed construction adds stability and strength.

Fiberglass is durable, corrosion-proof, attractive and translucent, allowing sunlight to pass through. Sunlight quickly dries interior moisture in the chute. The hard gleaming gelcote surface will remain for many years.

A system well devised and constructed for an uncomplicated and economical operation, modern and advanced, it will help you to gain your well deserved maximum return on your investment.

More layers per square foot of building space, more than any other system on the market today, 10,000 layers per 285 cage row

Lower maximum cage height, even lower than most 3 deck systems (6'8" max height, 4'6" max. width)

No special and costly floor or pit construction

The 4 deck system can be installed in an existing building, without costly conversion or remodeling problems.

Double or even triple your current building capacity.

Automatic manure removal, giving an odor free environment, healthier animals, more pleasant and healthier working conditions.

Higher bird concentration assures a comfortable, energy saving temperature during cold season.

Summer ventilation is easier to accomplish because of the absence of ammonia and other fumes.

The Dairy Business

By Newton Bair

Nearly every issue of any farm paper or magazine will contain at least one success story. They always make interesting reading, because we can always find some segment of the story that can personally relate to us or someone we know. And these true stories nearly always contain a few gems of information that can be valuable to someone else

A story of this kind recently appeared, featuring a very high producing herd in Lackawanna County The Skeypuk Brothers, sons of a poor Russian immigrant, tell how they developed a herd with a 21,444 pound milk average without going into debt. In this day and age of high finance on the farm, that is some accomplishment!

Now, the point that caught my eye, and judging by the questions and comments I've heard, other eyes as well, was the feed program used by the Skeypuks' Their grain mix was published, and many readers immediately interpret that particular mix as being a magic formula for high production It's particular magic for the Skeypuks lies in the fact that it works, not by itself, but as a small part of the whole bag of management tricks I have no doubt that under a different set of prices and availability of the ingredients, they could switch to another formula and balance it up to get the same production results

The keys to successfully balancing a dairy ration using alternate ingredients are price and availability Using Petersons comparative values for different supplements and grain by-products that can be used in dairy feed, we can determine if and when substitutes can be economically made. That is, if they are available

Corn and soybean meal are used as the basis of comparison. When other sources of high energy and protein are compared using the Peterson standards, we often find that barley or oats, or wheat can be substituted for some of the corn Likewise, brewers' grain, distillers' dried grains, corn gluten or hominy might be favorable substitutes for soybean meal as a source of protein. the point is that rations can be varied and still furnish all the goodies needed by a cow to produce at a high level Of course, to work right the ration must be carefully balanced for Enerngy (TDN), Crude Protein and all the necessary materials and vitamins.

This kind of juggling of dairy ration ingredients is done all the time by the commercial feed manufacturers They have the advantage of being able to access the market on a great variety of substitutes that are not always available to use dairymen locally. But the dairymen can sometimes benefit from price savings in the market through ready-mix formulations.

The Peterson values have been programed for the TI-59 calculator. By keying in the price of shelled corn per ton and the price of 44 percent soybean meal per ton, the computer prints out the comparative values as follows:

Feed Ingredient	Value Per Ton For Dairy Feed
Shelled corn	★ 167.00
44% Soybean meal	★ 275.00
Alfalfa hay	107.73
Barley	166.36
Beet Pulp	151 74
Dried Brewers grain	190 06
Wet Brewers grain	42 48
Ear Corn	148 36
Corn silage	31 86
Corn Gluten feed	195 50
Dried Distillers	213.32
Hominy	177.48
Oats	175.21
48% Soybean meal	289.45
Wheat	180.50
Wheat Bran	163.32

★ These are input values as of March 21

If any of these can be purchased for the listed price or below, they will be good buys, compared with shelled corn and soybean meal. Just make sure that the ration is balanced for TDN, Crude Protein, minerals and vitamins.

There is no one magic formula that will put everyone on top in efficient production. The only magic lies in doing a good job of selecting the ingredients and blending them into a wholesome, well balanced ration That takes either "the eye of the master", or a good computer program.

Pork producers seek ag funds increase

WASHINGTON, D C — In testimony before the Senate Committee on Agriculture, John Saunders, President of the National Pork Producers Council stated the industry's plea for increased funds for agricultural research.

"The American farmer is being asked to assume the greatest burden in his history and except an unparalleled challenge. He is being asked to feed 220 million consumers at home and twice that many abroad," said Saunders.

He assumes this task willingly but he must have more tools, not less. He must have more technology through research, he must have more understanding from government and consumers," he said

NPPC has drawn attention to dwindling agriculture research funds in hopes of reviving the nation's interest in increasing the food supply

This year, only 2.2 percent of the national research budget will be spent on agriculture. During 1949, 39 percent of all research funds were allocated to projects aimed at improved food production During 1950, agricultural funding had slipped to six percent

"We have more people to feed now than ever before," said Saunders, and yet, our only means of increasing productivity and the food supply - research has diminished substantially."

Saunders told the committee that funding for research is a good investment In the hog industry, return on research investment is about 52 percent, which is higher than any other type of livestock and much higher than most manufacturing industries

Productivity in agriculture has plateaued because there have not been any recent breakthroughs in technology to increase the efficiency of production," said Saunders, "we in agriculture are being asked to do more with less. Pork producers are doing their fair share by providing research funds to state universities to be used on selected pork production problems"

"We can feed America, however, it will require some risks, hard work, and a realization that we have more problems to solve than ever before," Saunders added, "and research is the key to solving these problems"

Sulfur affects yields on Delmarva peninsula

NEWARK, DEL. — Sulfur deficiency in the soil may be limiting crop yields on the Delmarva peninsula.

For a long time, substantial amounts of sulfur were added to the soil as impurities in fertilizers in the form of ammonium sulfate and ordinary 16-18 percent sulfur phosphate

But fertilizers now in use are much more highly refined, containing little or no sulfur This is especially true of liquid fertilizers, says University of Delaware extension soil specialist Leo Cotnoir. These new fertilizers are much less bulky and cheaper to transport. This is an advantage to the user, even if it means losing the sulfur

Recent attempts to reduce sulfur in the atmosphere through better pollution control could also affect plants, says Cotnoir.

Some 20 to 30 pounds of sulfur is added to the soil through rainfall each year. This is the "acid rain" that has recently aroused so much concern. Yet this acid rain may produce benefits to plants by adding sulfur to the soil. As efforts to reduce air pollution succeed, less sulfur will reach the ground from this source.

Soils with well-developed subsoils that contain clay are usually well supplied with sulfur, which moves down in the soil and is effectively retained in the clay. Soils with high organic matter content or soils to which manures have been added will probably contain adequate sulfur.

The sandy, low organic matter soils, which account for a substantial acreage in southern Delaware, are generally low in sulfur, nowever, Many of these soils are irrigated, which results in leaching of this minor nutrient. Addition of sulfur to these soils may be needed for optimum yields.

Sulfur is readily and cheaply applied, says the specialist. Gypsum (calcium sulfate) is a common industrial by-product It is a cheap and very good source of sulfur. Some ammonium sulfate is also available locally. As a source of nitrogen, it is slightly more expensive than urea or ammonium nitrate. But where sulfur deficiencies are suspected, it's an excellent source of both nitrogen and sulfur. Very fine (300 mesh) elemental sulfur or ammonium thiosulfate may be added to liquid fertilizers to increase their sulfur content.

It is unlikely that widespread sulfur deficiencies exist in Delaware. It is equally unlikely that additional sulfur will be profitable at yield levels of 100-125 bushels of corn or 35 bushels of soybeans.

But when other limiting factors, especially water, have been removed and 175 to 200 bushels of corn or more appear possible, sulfur may become important.

Available information is currently very limited. It will be important during the next few years to look at the role of sulfur in crop production, says Cotnoir.

Lime-Valley Lightning, bred by James High, Lancaster, has been added to proven sire list of Atlantic Breeders Cooperative.

Lancaster bull proven at Atlantic

LANCASTER — A registered Holstein bull from a Lancaster County breeder is one of the new genetic leaders for high milk production at Atlantic Breeders Cooperative, according to Harry Roth, operations director.

The bull, 15H242 Lime-Valley Lightning, bred by James High, Lancaster, is among three sires added to Atlantic's selection of well-proven bulls now available for extensive artificial insemination service

Roth explains that based on a January, 1981 summary compiled by the U.S Department of Agriculture, Lightning had 26 daughters in 24 different dairy herds which yielded average production of 18,089 pounds of milk with 3.6% butterfat

The bull originally joined the Atlantic stud four years ago for random-mating to approximately 600 Holstein cows in herds owned by Atlantic members Specially selected for Atlantic's breeding program through his bloodlines, Lightning's sire is Romandale Dividend Performer, a former member of the Cooperative's stud that received the Gold Medal Sire aware from the Holstein Association Lightning's dam, Lime-Valley Sylvia, is scored "Very Good-88" in body conformation and completed several good production records in High's herd

Beef forecasts miss mark

DENVER, Colo. — Retail beef prices are averaging lower than had been expected at this time With production seasonally large, consumers can look for more featuring of beef at special prices.

This was pointed out by the National Cattlemen's Assn. as it embarked on a nationwide campaign to show food retailers and the public that beef is one item in abundant supply and at favorable prices for consumers.

"Last fall and winter the U.S Department of Agriculture and other forecasters kept predicting short supplies of beef and sharply higher prices this spring," NCA President J.W. (Bill) Swan said. "These forecasts badly missed the mark, but they were repeated so often that many people came to believe there indeed was a limited supply of beef

"As a result of the forecasts, retail beef featuring, at least until recently, has been limited and the public has not realized that beef is or will be a good buy at this time "

In 1980, beef prices averaged only 5 percent higher than in 1979, NCA noted Again this year, any increase in the average price is likely to be less than the general inflation rate. Retail beef prices right now, NCA's latest survey shows, are down from a year earlier And cattle and wholesale beef prices are substantially lower than last March

Swan noted supplies of beef and other meats so far this year have been considerably larger than expected. With the big supply, cattle prices have been depressed And, has been the case for more than 1½ years, cattlemen have been experiencing severe losses.

"Frankly," Swan said, "our future, and the future of adequate beef production. depend on more aggressive movement of beef now. We have to get through the current burdensome supply. That is why we have asked USDA to call more public attention to the very ample supplies of meat in general and beef in particular.

"Furthermore, cattlemen are calling on the top officials of national and regional supermarket companies, plus numerous local firms, in order to explain the beef situation Supermarkets in some cities already are promoting beef strongly, at special bargain prices We are asking those who have not yet done so to immediately do more featuring Our advice to the public is to watch for good price specials on various beef cuts, particularly now in this period of abundant meat supplies.

"With large numbers of cattle placed in feedlots in the Fall, we usually have a seasonal bulge in cattle marketings at this time This year, the supply increase has been even greater than expected Production of other meats also has been large.

"There will be some fluctations in meat supplies and prices as we move through the year. But total per capita supplies for the year will be near record levels, and, from a consumer standpoint, one of the best supply periods is right now."

Angus Assn. supports beef grade changes

ST. JOSEPH, Mo — The American Angus Association Board of Directors has gone on record in support of the proposed USDA beef carcass grading changes that were adopted by members of the National Cattlemen's Association at their recent convention in Phoenix, reports Myron Woolever, president of the American Angus Association.

"The proposed guidelines for revising the USDA beef carcass grading standards should not measurably affect the quality of beef that is graded USDA Choice," said Myron Woolever ' At the same time the Board believes that the grade revisions will help achieve the following goals increase the demand for beef, decrease production costs to the entire beef industry, and produce a leaner product that will maintain the superior position of beef in the red meat industry

Action supporting the grade revisions was taken in a formal resolution adopted by the Angus Association board of directors at their regular quarterly meeting February 23, here

NPC achievement award goes to Childers

MARTINSBURG, WV — The 1981 National Peach Council Achievement Award was presented to Norman F Childers of Rutgers University, New Brunswick, New Jersey.

Outgoing NPC President Douglas Zee presented the Award at the Western Theme Party during the NPC Convention in Phoenix, Arizona

Childers has been an outstanding contributor to the advancement of the peach industry and of National Peach Council. He has attended 12 NPC conventions beginning in Columbus, Ohio, in 1937, and has served on many NPC committees He is currently a member of the Research & Education Committee

In 1963, Childers organized and conducted the National Peach Conference and produced the book "The Peach" a 600 page book which has been printed in 4 editions, circulating 8500 copies He is now revising the book for a 5th edition in 1982

From 1974 to 1978, Childers traveled around the world visiting 55 countries studying various aspects of horticulture including peach growing His findings on those travels were discussed in his speech at the NPC convention in San Antonio in 1978, which was published in the proceedings of that meeting

Childers suggested and helped establish the Carroll R Miller Award sponsored by National Peach Council This award is presented by the American Society for Horticultural Science In 1974, he won that award for the research paper, 'Calcium Nutrition of Peach and Prune Relative to Growth, Fruiting and Fruit Quality" with co-author Dennis A Abdalla

Childers was born in Moscow, Idaho, and was active as a 4-H member there He became interested in pomology, and studied at the University of Missouri After receiving his doctorate at Cornell University, he served on the faculty there and at Ohio State University. He served as Assistant Director of the USDA Experiment Station in Puerto Rico, then moved on to Rutgers University and has been there since 1948. He has published a large number of research papers and other articles on peaches

Sheep good on baaaa'd land

YORK — Sheep production of lands unsuitable for cultivated crops offers an opportunity for increasing income from small farms in Pennsylvania and other states of the Northeast region, according to Anthony G. Dobrosky, York County Agricultural Agent.

"On small farms a high percentage of the land has inherent restrictions to growth of cultivated crops, and throughout the region under-utilized land is common," says Dobrosky. "Growth of forage crops and their utilization through livestock offers an alternative use for these marginal lands."

Sheep production, in particular, offers advantages over other animal enterprises because of the small size of sheep and their ability to utilize forages. Sheep can be grown from minimal amounts of grain and with minimal equipment.

Furthermore, a good market for sheep exists today. Consumer demand exceeds supply in key market areas. In the New York City area, for example, only 50 percent of the known demand for lamb is being met.

"The demand is so great," notes Dobrosky, "because sheep numbers in this country have declined sharply over the years." In 1942 there were about 50 million head of sheep in the United States. By 1977 their numbers had declined to 12.4 million.

Dobrosky cautions, however, against assuming that sheep require no management and can be placed on any farm acreage. "To maintain high production and help the sheep best utilize feed, it is important to provide forages of sufficiently high quality at critical times and in adequate quantities," he says.

To insure low-cost sheep production for small farmers, machinery and other crop-production costs must be kept to a minimum. Techniques for establishing improved forage species and improving low production pastures without the use of expensive seeding equipment and large amounts of fertilizers and herbicides are needed.

"Worming helps our cows keep going after they freshen. So we worm regularly before they freshen..."

Galen Crouse, Schoeneck, PA

Galen Crouse has his 125 registered Holsteins on a regular prefreshening worming program with TBZ. He thinks prefreshening worming should be standard management practice.

"Everybody knows cows have worms. And worms do the most harm when cows freshen because that's when they give the most milk. We know, because when we began worming with TBZ® about two years ago - at freshening - production didn't fall off as quick."

"Keeps them eating"

"After worming, we noticed the cows kept eating better. And, of course, if they don't eat, you don't get production. When you consider your production stays up and your cows don't get thin, the cost for worming is really minimum."

"Everybody recommends it"

"We started worming at freshening because our veterinarian recommended it. The State Extension people recommend it too. Worming is recommended at every meeting you go to. Everybody recommends it.

"We worm with TBZ in feed. It's a single treatment per lactation. We put it on grain in front of the cow and forget about it. The cows eat it right up. It's that simple."

"From what we've seen, we think worming with TBZ before freshening should be part of every management program." Your dealer, feed supplier, and veterinarian have TBZ in a feed or dosage form that fits your management. Start your prefreshening worming program with TBZ, now.

Md. Co-op announces quality award winners

COCKEYSVILLE, Md — Seventeen dairy farmers were honored by their fellow members in Maryland Cooperative Milk Producers, Inc for producing milk of exceptional quality The awards were presented last Saturday during the 46th Annual Meeting and Banquet of MCMP at Marriott's Hunt Valley Inn, Cockeysville, Md

The awards program was created by MCMP in an effort to recognize those producers who make that extra effort to produce milk of the highest quality The program is also designed to encourage the members to continue their efforts and to motivate others to do likewise.

The quality production awards are divided into three categories· Excellence, Gold and Silver The hardest award to earn and consequently the most prestigious is the Award of Excellence In 1980, only seventeen of MCMP's 1000 members earned this recognition

The criteria for the selection of recipients of the Excellence Award are stringent

To be chosen a producer must meet the following requirements (1) All standard plate bacteria counts under 10,000 for 1980; (2) No off-odor rejection; (3) No positive antibiotic test results; (4) No unsatisfactory sediments; (5) No somatic cell counts in excess of 1,000,000/ml. and; (6) a 99 percent average on all farm inspections by the Health Department and the Cooperative in 1980

The seventeen members who met the tough standards include H. Howard Barkdoll or E. Geneva Barkdoll, Boonsboro, Md.; Dale L Barnshinger, York, Pa.; Vaughn F Bradley or Edythe N Bradley, Taneytown, Md.; Claude M Cooper or Kevin C. Cooper, New Freedom, Pa ; C. Glenn Daugherty or Dolores J Daugherty, Greencastle, Pa

Also, George C or Dorothy V. or Daniel D Fritz, New Windsor, Md ; Robert L Grove or Norma M Grove, Greencastle, Pa ; Herndon Farms, Keymar, Md ; Millard D Kefauver, Jr or Erma P Kefauver, Keedysville, Md ; Paul H Lambert or Esther L Lambert, Frederick, Md ; Richard E. Moser or Betty J. Mower, Keymar, Md ; Raymond E. Schrock or Mabel E Schrock, Grantsville, Md

And, Arlie T Smith or Charles K Smith, Thurmont, Md.; John E. or Mary F. Smith or John P. Smith, New Windsor, Md.; Norman M Stauffer, Loveville, Md ;, Joseph S Stoltzfus, Mechanicsville, Md , and Christian T Swarey, Mechanicsville, Md.

Seventy-two producers earned Gold Awards during 1980. Dairymen who qualify must also be very particular in their dairying operation. The criteria for the Gold Award are the same as for the Excellence with the exception of the farm inspection scores The Gold group must have an average farm inspection score of at least 92.

The Silver Award criteria, though not as tough as the Gold or Excellence group, is still worthy of recognition. Those producers who earned the Silver met all requirements previously listed for the Gold with the exception that all standard plate counts must have been under 50,000 and eleven of the twelve must have been 10,000 or under. Fifty-two producers earned the Silver recognition

Del. Extension specialist stresses vitamins in swine

NEWARK, Del. — Vitamins are important for normal body metabolism in pigs, as well as people, says University of Delaware extension livestock specialist Richard Fowler.

The requirement is small, so hog producers sometimes overlook it. When this happens normal reproduction or bone growth may be critically affected before you realize it.

Some vitamins are produced in the pig's body. But many must be fed. The confinement-raised pig must rely heavily on dietary sources because there are no lush green pastures in the hog house.

There are two groups of vitamins that a hog needs — fat soluble and water soluble. The fat soluble ones include vitamins A, D, E, and K The water soluble or B vitamins include riboflavin or B2 pantothenic acid, niacin, B12, and choline. Each has a specific function and is usually added to the swine diet in a crystalline or powder form Vitamin A is present in corn, but this source isn't dependable.

What do these vitamins do? Deficiencies in vitamin A result in poor coordination, back weakness, partial or total blindness, poor conception rates, dead pigs at birth, boar sterility and deformities of newborn pigs

Sows and pigs on starter diets (up to 60 pounds) should have 2000 International Units of vitamin A per pound of feed. The growing finishing pigs needs 1200 IU per pound of feed.

It is assumed that breeding animals get 4-5 pounds of feed a day except during lactation when they get 9-12 pounds daily. Other pigs are all on self-feeders.

Vitamin D is known as the bone-growth factor Pigs that have access to sunlight every day produce their own supply. But this vitamin must be fed to pigs in confinement, says Fowler.

Most natural feed ingredients are low in this vitamin. There are two sources of vitamin D — D_2, which is found in plants, and D_3, the animal source Pigs can use both forms, but chickens can use only D_3

Deficiency of this nutrient causes rickets (deformed bones), stiffness, lameness, joint swelling, and poor growth rate Mature animals' bones fracture easily without enough vitamin D The requirement is 200 IU per pound of feed for the breeding herd and 120 IU for the growing finishing pig

Confinement raising and artificial drying of grain have increased the incidence of vitamin E deficiency symptoms in hogs, says the specialist This vitamin is related to the mineral selenium

When selenium is low, there's an increase in the requirement for vitamin E. Signs of low vitamin E intake include sudden death, jaundice, edema (collection of fluids in body tissue), white muscles, and liver damage Pregnant sows may lose their litters and pigs nursing deficient sows may show muscular incoordination All pigs require 5 IU per pound of feed of this nutrient

Blood clotting time is related to vitamin K Though this vitamin is present in many feedstuffs and made by intestinal bacteria, deficiencies still occur, so diets should be supplemented with vitamin K. Tail biting problems are complicated by insufficient K Moldy feeds aggravate low levels of this nutrient.

Alfalfa meal is a good source of K and meets the needs of most pigs when included in the ration at 2 5 percent. A synthetic product — menadione sodium bisulfite — can do the job too, if added at the rate of 2 grams per ton of feed. The requirement is 1 milligran per pound of feed for all pigs

Natural feed ingredients are poor sources of the fat soluble vitamins, so synthetic sources should be added. Vitamins for swine are available from commercial premix companies They are added to corn and soybean meal diets on the farm or are combined with the perotein source in a complete supplement.

Most producers prefer either of these two ways of adding vitamins to making their own premixes on the farm Commercial suppliers of vitamin premixes have better quality control and mixing facilities.

When buying a vitamin premix, limit the quantity to a three-month supply. Mix enough feed for three weeks only, because some vitamins lose potency when mixed with other ingredients

Farm Talk

Jerry Webb

Getting started in farming isn't easy, but it isn't impossible — at least not yet.

I read about enough young farmers throughout the country who are managing ways to grab the first rung of the ladder to farming success Granted, most of them are getting started by working into the family business But there are some others with no relatives and no prospects for an agricultural inheritance who want to farm What should they be told?

First of all, they should know it's not easy, but it can be done

Farming is not a closed business — not this year anyway — and it may not be for several years to come It takes some finances, some knowhow, a lot of desire and an inordinate amount of faith and courage A young person with those things going, plus a little patience, can probably get started in farming

A start in farming doesn't necessarily mean a 500-acre spread, the latest equipment for growing corn and soybeans, and a brand new pickup truck

It's more apt to be a rundown 50 acres that can be developed into a high risk, high income vegetable business Or the first step into a swine operation, or maybe if will be home base to an expanding operation that relies on rented land

There are farmers around who want to bring someone into the business Farmers who have no offspring interested in farming — who have established a good operation and want to see it continued. And it's just human nature to want to help somebody who's trying to get started

So combine those two factors — the desire to keep a thriving farm business functioning and the desire to help somebody — and you have the elements needed It's just a matter of getting the right people together.

In that kind of situation a young person might have to start out as hired labor, doing whatever the farmer wanted done for a year or two until the owner was convinced that this was the right person Then some sort of deal might develop that would involve shares, buying in, and bonuses for outstanding efforts Things like that would allow the young person to use his or her energies to the fullest

Meantime, the farmer-owner could start to hand over certain responsibilities and take life a little easier, that way gradually working into a retirement posture with a young farmer buying in and providing retirement income The owner would still be there to give management suggestions, extra labor when needed, and maybe even operating capital

It's a typical parent-child arrangement without the hindrance of being related It gives the farmer a chance to 'recruit" a successor, something that a lot of farmers don't get a chance to do because they have heirs

Another way for an enterprising young farmer to get started is through a rental arrangement

A long-term deal is best and preferably one based on shares It may be possible to rent a whole farm, equipped and all

Or, if equipment's the problem, don't let the $200,000 price tag quoted so frequently be the stopper Go for good used equipment

Successful Farming magazine quotes a midwestern auctioneer who says a young farmer can get started with adequate row crop equipment for $35,000 It won't be the newest or the biggest, but it will be serviceable and with a little winter maintenance can do quite well

Here s his list A John Deere 4320 tractor $11,500, a five-bottom plow, $1000, an 18-foot disk, $3000, four-row planter, $2250, a John Deere 95 combine, $12,000, miscellaneous tillage and wagons, $5000 That's a total of $34,750 — not something you could save out of a year's earnings from an off-farm job, but again not impossible for someone planning ahead

Beyond land and equipment there is the tremendous challenge of operating capital. It takes a lot of money to run a farm and in a bad year, it may take more money than expected just to get started again the following season

Here's where a serious young farmer needs to have a good rapport with a lending institution that understands agriculture and has faith in that person's future

Want something else to think about?

All of the economic indicators are pointing to some boom years ahead for agriculture Economists have been talking boom years a long time and there have been a few But the world food situation is reaching the point where good years in agriculture should outweight the bad ones by a considerable margin

The young farmers who went into business in the early seventies thinking it was going to be prosperity from then on got disappointed And young farmers now who start thinking it's all sunshine and roses will probably be disappointed also

There are bound to be some ups and downs, but the ups are going to be higher and the downs shouldn't be quite so low. Given decent weather conditions, a young person could start on a shoestring and have a chance.

It won't be easy, but then it never has been Young farmers of 50 years ago who started as a sharecropper with a team of mules and $100 thought they had problems too example, assume that the supplement tag says the bag contains 1,000,000 IU of vitamin A per pound of premix Assume also that the tag instructs you to add 10 pounds of supplement to 1 ton of feed This means there will be 10,000,000 units of vitamin A per ton of feed, or 5,000 IU (10,000,000 divided by 2,000) of A per pound of mixed feed. The gestating sow needs 2,000 IU per pound of ration, so this premix would provide her with more than an adequate amounts of this nutrient Make sure your hogs get adequate amounts of the other vitamins, too

Hoagland to head food, nutrition service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Secretary of Agriculture John Block Monday appointed G. William Hoagland administrator of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Food and Nutrition Service, the agency responsible for the federal food stamp and child nutrition programs

Hoagland previously worked for five years in the Congressional Budget Office's division of human resources and community development He also headed that office's income security and employment unit, where he handled policy analysis of legislative issues related to domestic food and nutrition policies as well as federal employment programs and income security issues

Before working for the Congressional Budget Office, Hoagland worked on the Food and Nutrition Service's economic analysis and program evaluation staff in 1974-75. He also served as an associate director for Indiana's comprehensive health planning agency.

Hoagland has dealth with poverty-related nutrition issues since his graduate work in agricultural economics at Pennsylvania State University, where he completed his master's degree in 1972. His thesis work analyzed aspects of rural participation in the food stamp program.

Fowl plague experts to meet in Maryland

BELTSVILLE, Md. — The world's foremost experts on fowl plague—avian influenza—will meet April 22-24 at Beltsville, Md., to pool information about this highly destructive disease of poultry and other birds, a U.S. Department of Agriculture veterinarian said.

The international symposium is being sponsored by the U.S. Animal Health Association, USDA, the U.S. State Department and several poultry industry organizations.

According to I.L. Peterson, poultry veterinarian with USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, participants are expected from the United States, Canada, Australia, Mexico, France, Germany, Hong Kong, Israel, Italy, Japan, United Kingdom, Belgium and Czechoslovakia

Fowl plague is one of the most potentially destructive diseases affecting poultry and other birds, Peterson said. "As in human influenza, the causative virus is constantly changing, which makes the disease capable of causing widespread losses in susceptible populations before it can be brought under control.

"This meeting is aimed at establishing understanding of the disease and the roles of research and regulatory animal health officials and scientists in finding the most practical methods for controlling it."

The symposium, which will be held in building 005 of USDA's Agricultural Research Center, is open to the public. Reservations may be made by contacting the U S. Animal Health Association at 6924 Lakeside Ave., suite 205, Richmond, Va. 23228.

Wins ad competition

LANCASTER — A 30-second Pennfield Farms television spot was awarded the "Best of Show" designation by the Central Pennsylvania Advertising Federation last month in Harrisburg.

The commercial was a "tongue-in-cheek" jibe at the poultry-growing techniques used by a major competitor. The commercial says. "Some people will try anything to grow a tender chicken. They g ve 'em cookies. Nonsense! At Pennfield Farms, our Pennsylvania Dutch know-how gives you chicken that's meaty, juicy, tasty and tender No gimmicks — just good eating."

In addition to its "Best of Show" award, the spot won the Federation's gold award for the best television commercial of 1980.

The commercial was produced by Foltz-Wessinger, Inc., a Lancaster-based advertising firm who handles advertising for Pennfield Corporation's chicken and eggs division.

Livestock to mount pressure on grain supplies

PETIT JEAN MTN., Ark. — U.S. livestock and grain producers can expect a larger share of the world market in the 1980's, but also will face new sources of uncertainty and instability, according to a global study released this week by the Arkansas-based Winrock International Livestock Research and Training Center.

R.O. Wheeler, Center President and senior author, noted, "Our nation's portion of total world grain exports is projected to climb to 70 percent by 1985-and we will continue our strong lead in key components of the worldwide system of meats, grains and related products."

"The driving variable in our estimates is the expected increase in world livestock product consumption and production. World per capita consumption of meat is projected to increase by about 14 percent-to about 80 pounds per capita annually.

"To meet these needs, use of grain for livestock feed will multiply rapidly-with the percentage of world grain used by livestock expected to exceed 47 percent (excluding rice). In 1985, ten million more tons of grain will be used for livestock than for direct human consumption."

Wheeler cautioned that this increased use of grain for livestock feed on a global basis "has important implications for major exporters such as the U.S.-it puts additional pressure on world grain supplies, shifts the purchasing pattern of grain importers, and introduces new sources of instability in the world grain market."

Although the study projects total world grain production at 1351.7 million tons in 1985-a 20 percent increase over 1977-78 production-this amount would fall 25.6 million tons short of quantites needed to balance the world's total trend needs.

A 24 percent increase in human use of grain is projected, from 502 million tons in 1977-78 to 622 million tons by 1985.

"Within this projected global context, the dominance of U.S. production takes on added significance," Wheeler said. "The U.S. would be providing about seven out of every ten bushels traded among the regions of the world. Our nation's contribution, added to Canada's, would mount to above 80 percent of total world grain exports."

According to study data, grain imports of the centrally-planned regions (Eastern Europe, the Soviet Union and China) would increase from 33 to 73 million tons, for a net 40-million-ton increase.

Grain imported by Eastern Europe and Russia would be needed primarily for livestock production, while imports by China would be used mostly for human food. The grain imported by the Soviet Union generally enters the direct-human-consumption market, thus releasing their lower quality domestically-produced grain for livestock use.

The Soviet livestock production system absorbs nearly 65 percent of Soviet domestic grain production. Also, a much higher proportion of wheat is used for livestock production in the Soviet system than is used in other regions.

In developing countries, the total grain production shortfall will increase from 40 to 93 million tons; all developing regions, except Indian and Thailand, are projected to have grain deficits. Since much of this grain would be used for human consumption, problems of minimal to substandard nutrition will persist in several Latin American, African, and Asian countries.

Wheeler noted that, "Despite these problems, more developing countries are feeding more grain to livestock, and their grain feeding is expected to rise from 50 million tons to a total of 79 million tons in 1985. Much of this grain is being fed to expanding poultry operations, some of which are completely dependent upon external grain supplies."

"There seems to be a clear need to reassess the relative amount of grain used for poultry products in the livestock system as compared to the energy derived from these products for human comsumption. Careful analysis shows that the world's increasing poultry production is placing relatively heavier demands on total world grain energy supplies than is ruminant animal production."

Wheeler said rigorous assessment of the relative contributions of these products could have strong implications for estimating worldwide food supplies from animal agriculture.

"Specifically, it could challenge the wisdom of the developing countries expanding their food supply with heavy emphasis on poultry (and perhaps swine) This challenge would not be based on poultry's technical efficiency in converting grain energy to meat, but on the basis of relative amount of human energy derived from the various sources of total feed energy that can be converted into food energy."

Gail Cramer of Montana State University noted the study data provide new insights into problems of human food distribution

Cramer explained the Winrock International study design allows much greater precision in assessment of worldwide consumption and production patterns Previously, only crude diagnostic instruments had been available to sort out some of the factors that might be contributing to unstable markets, energy and protein distribution.

Although the caloric food requirements for human consumption were relatively easy to estimate for different regions of the world, much less was known about the world livestock population and use of imported feedstuffs. Cramer said that demand is less stable for feed ingredients, as compared to that for crops such as wheat or rice, due to cyclical changes in livestock population and variation in livestock product consumption during economic depressions.

The data base and procedures developed by Winrock International spell out the energy and protein inputs (feedstuffs) required for specific outputs (meat, eggs, milk, etc.) These calculations can be made for different species of livestock in each country of the world.

"To suggest that Winrock's involvement with this type of research is terminated with the completion of this study is far from true," said Wheeler. "We will continue to actively pursue projects in the public policy research field with both public and private institutions."

Copies of the extensive report of the study can be obtained by writing Winrock International, R3, Morrilton, Arkansas 72110.

Order 2 dairymen asked for milk comment

LITITZ — Dairy farmers, cooperatives, milk handlers and consumers have until April 7 to file exceptions to a U.S Department of Agriculture recommended decision that would amend the New York-New Jersey federal milk marketing order.

Herbert L Forest dairy official with USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service, said the recommended decision is based on record of a public hearing held last June in Albany, N.Y Principal cities in the market order are are Albany, Syracuse and New York, N.Y., and Newark, N.J.

The hearing on proposed changes in the market order had been requested by the North Atlantic Milk Processors' Association, which includes a number of the handlers regulated under the marketing order.

Forest said the recommended decision would increase the order's transportation allowances for milk handlers to reflect the increased costs of assembling milk from dairy farms' and transporting it to plants for processing.

This would create a more equitable situation for handlers under the order who are in intermarket competition with handlers in the neighboring Middle Atlantic federal milk marketing area.

Forest also said the changes would more nearly equalize procurement costs among competing New York City processors who are receiving milk directly from dairy farms and those who obtain their milk supplies from country supply plants.

The recommended decision was published in the March 18 Federal Register, Copies of which are available at most public libraries. Comments and exceptions should be sent to. Hearing Clerk, Rm. 1077-S, USDA, Washington, D C. 20250
